Minecraft David Aldrige, 2016-07-13 Use These Guidelines Of Super Effective Minecraft Strategies And Be Smarter Than Everyone Else Today! One of the first considerations in Minecraft is time management. There isn't much of it when you first spawn into a newly generated world. A day in Minecraft lasts for twenty real-time minutes: ten minutes of daylight and ten minutes of moonlight. So the sun will slowly rise and eventually reach its peak at midday and then start to fall. The darkness descends and suddenly all around mobs will start popping up ready to hunt you down and try to nibble on your bones. The night is an integral part of the game. When the sun sets, you must change everything you do to stay alive. At night, the light level across the world is set to 4, which means that hostile mobs can spawn anywhere on the surface of the Overworld. Mobs can only spawn where there is a light level of less than 7, which is why light sources are paramount for keeping them away at night. As you become more advanced in Survival Mode you'll gain the ability to skip the night by sleeping in a bed, plus you'll be better equipped with armour in the face of nightly threats. So with only ten minutes, from the moment you're dropped into the map, it is advised you spend your time wisely and get off to a good start, and keep track of the sun's progress and how long it is till nightfall because the first night will come much faster than you anticipate. So, without further ado, let's get started. Here Is A Sneak Peek Of What You Will Learn How to survive at night First mine and further exploration Building Survival Bases The nether and the end Advanced mining Farming And Much Much More...
