Each day, human beings invent new easier and smarter ways to do everything. When typewriters were invented, possibly a few believed we will later have a laptop and printer. Just the same way technology changed means of transportation, so it did communication. Technology elbowed out the era of posting letters and quickly landed us into short messaging (SMS) and phone calls. We have all seen different types of phones get into the market and any new invention makes the successor superior and hence making human beings more creative each day. Each day, everyone is keen on owning the latest smartphone so as to enjoy the new cool features. Due to market demand, several engineers have put in the work and caused rapid competition against each to offer the best.
