Cynthia Munoz

Red Light Camera Systems Cynthia Munoz, 2015 Red light running is one of the major causes of crashes, deaths, and injuries at signalised intersections. The Federal Highway Administration (FHWA) and National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA) support a comprehensive approach to intersection safety that incorporates engineering, education, and enforcement countermeasures to prevent red light running and improve intersection safety. Red light cameras can be a very effective countermeasure to prevent red light running. There are a number of studies that indicate reduction in crashes at signalised intersections due to red light cameras. The fundamental objective of the research in this book is to determine the effectiveness of RLC systems in reducing crashes. A description of all project efforts is described in this book.

Cost Benefit Analysis of Traffic Light & Speed Cameras Andrew Hooke, Jim Knox, David Portas, 1996

Use of Speed and Red-light Cameras for Traffic Enforcement Great Britain: Department for Transport, Great Britain: Department for Transport Staff, 2007-01-31 Safety cameras are an important part of an integrated road safety strategy, providing a cost-effective method of preventing, detecting and enforcing speed and traffic light offences, and encouraging safer driver behaviour. From April 2007, local authorities, the police and local partners will have greater freedom and flexibility to implement locally agreed road safety measures to reduce road casualties in their area, and this will include greater local accountability for the future deployment and operation of safety cameras. This Circular provides guidance and best practice advice on the deployment of speed and red-light cameras applicable in these circumstances after 1st April 2007. It supersedes Circular Roads 01/92 (Use of technology for traffic enforcement: guidance on deployment), Circular Roads 01/95 (Traffic signal and speed camera signing) and the Handbook for Rules and Guidance for the National Safety Camera Programme for England and Wales 2006/07, which are now cancelled.

Spying with Maps Mark Monmonier, 2002-11-15 Maps, as we know, help us find our way around. But they're also powerful tools for someone hoping to find you. Widely available in electronic and paper formats, maps offer revealing insights into our movements and activities, even our likes and dislikes. In Spying with Maps, the mapmatician Mark Monmonier looks at the increased use of geographic data, satellite imagery, and location tracking across a wide range of fields such as military intelligence, law enforcement, market research, and traffic engineering. Could these diverse forms of geographic monitoring, he asks, lead to grave consequences for society? To assess this very real threat, he explains how geospatial technology works, what it can reveal, who uses it, and to what effect. Despite our apprehension about surveillance technology, Spying with Maps is not a jeremiad, crammed with dire warnings about eyes in the sky and invasive tracking. Monmonier's approach encompasses both skepticism and the acknowledgment that geospatial technology brings with it unprecedented benefits to governments, institutions, and individuals, especially in an era of asymmetric warfare and bioterrorism. Monmonier frames his explanations of what this new technology is and how it works with the question of whether locational privacy is a fundamental right. Does the right to be left alone include not letting Big Brother (or a legion of Little Brothers) know where we are or where we've been? What sacrifices must we make for homeland security and open government? With his usual wit and clarity, Monmonier offers readers an engaging, even-handed introduction to the dark side of the new technology that surrounds us—from traffic cameras and weather satellites to personal GPS devices and wireless communications.
