BetterBus Girish Maiya,2019-04-07 General Transit Feed Specification (GTFS) is the standard for sharing data by Transit Providers. This book provides a detailed explanation about the standard and also provides details of the bus tracking app. Various features required in the bus tracking app is discussed along with details of how GTFS data can be used for building these features. This book would be helpful for understanding in detail GTFS data structure and their functionality. It can be used by readers from transit agencies, users of GTFS feeds, software developers working on a bus tracking app and anyone interested to know more about bus commuting.

Back on Track Philip G. Laird, 2001 Australia's freight transport system now has the highest proportion of truck use of any developed country in the world, and with New Zealand, its cities are heavily dependent on cars. Back on Track considers the historic, economic and political issues that have led to this situation, and concludes that the emergence of such a strongly road-oriented system has not been in the national interest, on both economic and environmental grounds. It develops a detailed analysis of Australia's 'road transport deficit'. The authors suggest that rail is the neglected element in Australian and New Zealand transport systems and despite a history of 'policy paralysis', they offer a rail-based ten point plan that could see both countries' transport systems 'back on track'. Using new data on transportation trends from Australia and around the world, the book sets out a vision for the future of freight and inter-capital transport in Australia and New Zealand, and offers innovative transport strategies for each of the major cities in both countries.

Real-time Bus Arrival Information Systems Carol L. Schweiger, Transit Cooperative Research Program, 2003 The synthesis describes the state of the practice in real-time bus arrival information systems, including both U.S. and international experience. The panel for this project chose to focus on bus systems, rather than all transit modes, and on the following six elements of these systems: bus system characteristics; real-time bus arrival information system characteristics, including information about the underlying technology and dissemination media; system prediction, accuracy, and reliability; system costs; customer and media reactions; and institutional and organizational issues associated with the system.
