Vagabond Adventures (Classic Reprint) Ralph Keeler, 2017-09-16 Excerpt from Vagabond Adventures T is an odd sort of fortune to have lived an out-of-the-way or adventurous life. There is always a temptation to tell of it, and not always a reasonable surety that others Share the interest in it of the cmzz'czzr himself. It would, indeed, be a nice problem in the descriptive geometry of narrative to determine the exact point where the lines of the two interests meet, - that of the nar rator and that of the people who have to endure the narration. I cannot say that I ever hope to solve this problem and in the present instance, especially, I would with due respect submit its solution to the acuter intellects of others. Visit us online at www.1stWorldLibrary.ORG - - As I started out from the farm with a basket of potatoes, for our supper in the shack half a mile up the hillside, where we had made our Summer camp, my eye fell on a notice affixed to a gate-post, and, as I read it, my heart sank - sank as the sun was sinking yonder with wistful glory behind the purple ridge. I tore the paper from the gate-post and put it in my pocket with a sigh. It is true, then, I said to myself. We have got to admit it. I must show this to Colin. Then I continued my way across the empty, close-gleaned corn-field, across the railway track, and, plunging into the orchard on the other side, where here and there among the trees the torrents of apples were being already caught in boxes by the thrifty husbandman, began to breast the hill intersected with thickly wooded watercourses.
