A Taxonomy for Texture Description and Identification A. Ravishankar Rao,2012-12-06 A central issue in computer vision is the problem of signal to symbol transformation. In the case of texture, which is an important visual cue, this problem has hitherto received very little attention. This book presents a solution to the signal to symbol transformation problem for texture. The symbolic description scheme consists of a novel taxonomy for textures, and is based on appropriate mathematical models for different kinds of texture. The taxonomy classifies textures into the broad classes of disordered, strongly ordered, weakly ordered and compositional. Disordered textures are described by statistical measures, strongly ordered textures by the placement of primitives, and weakly ordered textures by an orientation field. Compositional textures are created from these three classes of texture by using certain rules of composition. The unifying theme of this book is to provide standardized symbolic descriptions that serve as a descriptive vocabulary for textures. The algorithms developed in the book have been applied to a wide variety of textured images arising in semiconductor wafer inspection, flow visualization and lumber processing. The taxonomy for texture can serve as a scheme for the identification and description of surface flaws and defects occurring in a wide range of practical applications.

Mathematical Software - ICMS 2010 Komei Fukuda, Joris van der Hoeven, Michael Joswig, Nobuki Takayama, 2010-08-30 The ICMS Developer's Meeting is an international congress for which the main theme is mathematical software. The 2010 meeting was the third of a series of meetings of similar theme, the first being held in Beijing, China in 2002, and the second in Castro-Urdiales, Spain in 2006. The field of mathematics has numerous branches, and in each branch we find that algorithms, and also implementations and applications of software systems, are studied. Researchers who endeavor to make such studies also have international meetings within their specific branches of mathematics, and these meetings have made significant contributions to the fields in which they lie. The ICMS (International Congresses on Mathematical Software), on the other hand, is a general (not branch specific) meeting on mathematical software, which is held every four years, and is a rare opportunity for developers of mathematical software from different branches of mathematics, as well as mathematicians who are interested in mathematical software, to gather together.
