Whio/blue Duck (Hymenolaimus Malacorhynchos) Recovery Plan ,2010 The whio/blue duck (Hymenolaimus malacorhynchos) is an endangered species that is listed as Nationally Vulnerable under the New Zealand Threat Classification System (2008) due to a significant decline in abundance and distribution. Active management is needed to ensure the species' long-term survival, as whio are dependent on in situ management in suitable large-scale river systems, and require protection from the key threat of stoat (Mustela erminea) predation. This is the second national recovery plan for whio and follows on from the previous (1997-2007) recovery plan. This 10-year plan is a guide for the Department of Conservation (DOC) and interest groups involved in conserving whio. Its first priority is to secure populations to a minimum of 400 pairs at eight Security Sites throughout New Zealand by 2014. To achieve this, the whio recovery programme will control introduced predators, and target research towards gaining a further understanding of whio biology, threats and management requirements. The second priority is to recover or re-establish populations throughout their former range (Recovery Sites). The recovery programme will continue to investigate translocation/re-establishment techniques and improved predator control management. Public awareness, education and community involvement are important tools that will be used to assist the recovery of whio.
