Wind Speed Accuracy Near the Coastal Boundaries of the Mediterranean Sea ,2007 The atmospheric model grid from NWP (Numerical Weather Prediction) products tend to include land values over the ocean in near coastal regions. This is due to improper land-masks of the NWP products. causing serious errors in wind speed for coastal applications. Possible corrections are introduced to overcome such problems.

Wind-Borne Illness from Coastal Seas John J Walsh,2019-07-18 Wind-Borne Illness from Coastal Seas: Present and Future Consequences of Toxic Marine Aerosols explores the present and future human health consequences of marine aerosol poisons carried ashore by coastal winds. The book compiles relevant information on an interrelated toxicological, environmental sciences and public health problem that is combined with recent observations, extensive epidemiological data and case studies. It tackles this challenge with a small, interdisciplinary group of authors who dissect the underlying causes and potential remedies of increasing ill health issues on a planet that is covered by 70% seawater and subject to increasing sea spray-containing malign aerosols. The book's authors outline the historical context of the situation, discuss the importance of recognizing toxic marine aerosols as a cause of wind-borne illness, and suggest operational forecasts for avoidance of onshore, wind-borne marine toxins, and crucially, present extensive epidemiological evidence. This resource will be useful to a wide variety of toxicologists, medical doctors and environmental scientists. Contains extensive epidemiological data and case studies on aerosol forms of windborne global marine toxins Presents information from an interdisciplinary author team Argues for future operational forecasts for avoidance of onshore, windborne marine toxins

The Mediterranean region under climate change Collectif,2018-11-19 This book has been published by Allenvi (French National Alliance for Environmental Research) to coincide with the 22nd Conference of Parties to the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change (COP22) in Marrakesh. It is the outcome of work by academic researchers on both sides of the Mediterranean and provides a remarkable scientific review of the mechanisms of climate change and its impacts on the environment, the economy, health and Mediterranean societies. It will also be valuable in developing responses that draw on “scientific evidence” to address the issues of adaptation, resource conservation, solutions and risk prevention. Reflecting the full complexity of the Mediterranean environment, the book is a major scientific contribution to the climate issue, where various scientific considerations converge to break down the boundaries between disciplines.

Pilot Charts of Mediterranean A. Phillips, N. O. A.A., 2011-11-26 COMPLETE BOATING WEATHER INFORMATION FOR THE MEDITERRANEAN SEA. Now including links to a free app.. This is the complete original Atlas of Pilot Charts + Also now included is 10 year wind & weather information collected by NASA satellites. This is modern latest data. Highly useful for planning boating passages. Pilot Charts depict averages in prevailing winds and currents, air and sea temperatures, wave heights, ice limits, visibility, barometric pressure, and weather conditions at different times of the year. The charts are intended to aid the navigator in selecting the fastest and safest routes with regards to the expected weather and ocean conditions. Few sources of information are more important to offshore sailors than a pilot chart - and they are fascinating to study even if you never go five miles from port. In essence, they contain frequency and strength of wind from every direction, month by month, for every 5° square of every ocean. Their data are the result of hundreds of years of observation by mariners. Each atlas contains a pilot chart for every month of the year.

The southern and Swiss health resorts, their climate and medical aspect William Marcet, 1883

The Mediterranean Sea Gianluca Eusebi Borzelli, Miroslav Gacic, Piero Lionello, Paola Malanotte-Rizzoli, 2014-03-10 Surface, intermediate, and deep-water processes and their interaction in time and space drive the major ocean circulation of the Mediterranean Sea. All major forcing mechanisms, such as surface wind forcing, buoyancy fluxes, lateral mass exchange, and deep convection determining the global oceanic circulation are present in this body of water. Deep and intermediate water masses are formed in different areas of the ocean layers and they drive the Mediterranean thermohaline cell, which further shows important analogies with the global ocean conveyor belt. The Mediterranean Sea: Temporal Variability and Spatial Patterns is a comprehensive volume that investigates the temporal and spatial variability patterns in the ocean basin. Volume highlights include: Discussions of state-of-the-art physical and biogeochemical properties of the Mediterranean Sea

Multiple physical ocean circulation processes, both in time and spatial scales (basin, sub-basin, and mesoscale) How different regional phenomena in the sea influence the biogeochemistry of the basin and the ocean dynamics Spatio-temporal variability of the surface circulation in the western Mediterranean Deep-water variability and inter-basin interactions in the eastern Mediterranean Sea Understanding the link between global ocean circulation patterns and the global climate The Mediterranean Sea will be a valuable resource for geoscientists, oceanographers, and meteorologists.

A Prototype Expert System to Forecast Severe Winds in the Western Mediterranean Sea, 1989 A prototype expert system is designed to forecast severe winds in the western Mediterranean Sea. The first version of the expert system is to nowcast levante conditions in the Strait of Gibraltar and to nowcast/forecast mistral conditions in the Gulf of Lion. Rules of thumb for these events from the Handbook for Forecasters in the Mediterranean (Brody and Nestor 1980) are tested with observations during the period September 1988 through February 1989. Of the 19 rules listed in the Handbook for levante, five are used in the expert system without modification, six are modified and eight are discarded. Of the 41 rules for the mistral, 14 are used without modification, two are slightly modified and 25 are eliminated. The first step in each case is to select adjacent land stations whose observations best infer the presence of the gale wind conditions over the open seas, where in situ observations are not available. The basic approach in the expert system is to provide an ordered sequence of rules (based on the verifications during the six-month period) that the forecaster can continue to test until a forecast decision can be made with confidence. Operational testing is needed to refine the severe wind algorithm, which can be easily modified to include more empirical rules from forecasters in the future. Keywords: Levante forecasting, Mistral forecasting, Theses. (sdw).

Renewable Energy in Marine Environment Eugen Rusu, 2020-03-25 The effects of human-caused global warming are obvious, requiring new strategies and approaches. The concept of business-as-usual is now no longer beneficial. Extraction of renewable energy in marine environments represents a viable solution and an important path for the future. These huge renewable energy resources in seas and oceans can be harvested, including wind, tide, and waves. Despite the initial difficulties related mostly to the elevated operational risks in the harsh marine environment, newly developed technologies are economically effective or promising. Simultaneously, many challenges remain to be faced. These are the main issues targeted by the present book, which is associated with the Special Issue of Energies Journal entitled "Renewable Energy in Marine Environment". Papers on innovative technical developments, reviews, case studies, and analytics, as well as assessments, and papers from different disciplines that are relevant to the topic are included. From this perspective, we hope that the results presented are of interest to for scientists and those in related fields such as energy and marine environments, as well as for a wider audience.

Oil Pollution in the Mediterranean Sea: Part I
Angela Carpenter, Andrey G. Kostianoy, 2019-05-06
This volume offers a review of oil inputs to the Mediterranean Sea from sources such as shipping, and offshore exploration and exploitation activities. It discusses international measures to prepare for, respond to, and prevent oil pollution incidents, as well as the international legal framework and agencies with a role in pollution prevention and responses. It includes chapters on modeling the fate of oil pollution, oil spill response, and oil spill beaching probability, and presents data from a range of sources, including historic data on shipping accidents and oil exploration and exploitation activities, satellite and remote sensing data, and numerical modelling data, to provide an overview of oil pollution over several years. Topics covered include modelling of oil slicks in the eastern and western Mediterranean basins, oil exploration and exploitation activities in the waters of the Levantine Basin (Eastern Mediterranean), and signatures to and ratification of the Barcelona Convention and its Protocols, for example. Together with the companion volume Oil Pollution in the Mediterranean Sea: Part II - National Case Studies, it addresses both national and international measures in the region, making it of relevance to the agencies and government bodies tasked with remediating or preventing oil pollution, as well as policymakers and practitioners in the fields of shipping, ports and terminals, oil extraction and marine management. It provides researchers with essential reference material on tools and techniques for monitoring oil pollution, and serves as a valuable resource for undergraduate and postgraduate students in the field of marine oil pollution.
