Transport Systems of Russian Cities Mikhail Blinkin, Elena Koncheva, 2016-11-24 This volume discusses post-socialist urban transport functioning and development in Russia, within the context of the country's recent transition towards a market economy. Over the past twenty-five years, urban transport in Russia has undergone serious transformations, prompted by the transitioning economy. Yet, the lack of readily available statistical data has led to a gap in the inclusion of Russia in the body of international transport economics research. By including ten chapters of original, cutting-edge research by Russian transport scholars, this book will close that gap. Discussing topics such as the relationship between urban spatial structure and travel behavior in post-soviet cities, road safety, trends and reforms in urban public transport development, transport planning and modelling, and the role of institutions in post-soviet transportation management, this book provides a comprehensive survey of the current state of transportation in Russia. The book concludes with a forecast for future travel development in Russia and makes recommendations for future policy. This book will be of interest to researchers in transportation economics and policy as well as policy makers and those working in the field of urban and transport planning.

Location Theory Jacques-François Thisse, Kenneth John Button, Peter Nijkamp, 1996 A collection of 56 classic articles written since the 1950s dealing with a marginalized area of economics termed location theory. The two volume set alludes to the importance of the where in terms of economics (particularly in an international market) and how location fundamentally affects why certain economic activities establish themselves in a particular place. More specifically, the papers address topics related to the location theory of the firm, network location models, household location and land use, residential equilibrium, land use models, spatial competition and central place theories and models, interregional and intercity trade models, the spatial organization of public services, and operational models of location. Empirico-Statistical Analysis of Narrative Material and its Applications to Historical Dating A.T. Fomenko,2013-04-17 We present certain empirico-statistical methods for the analysis of narrative and numerical data extracted from different texts of historical character such as chronicles or annals. They are based on several statistical principles worked out by the author, and originally reported at the Third International Vilnius Conference on Probability Theory and Mathematical Statistics in 1981. The principal results were published in the papers [15]-[32], [293]-[299], [304]-[319] and in the book: A. T. Fomenko, Methods for Statistical Analysis of Narrative Texts and Applications to Chronology, Moscow Univ. Press, Moscow, 1990 (in Russian). See also Part 1. The methods are applied to the problem of correct dating of the events in ancient and medieval history. These results induce conjectures on the redating of some important ancient historical events. Generally speaking, we might say that the commonly accepted Modern Text book of ancient and medieval European, Mediterranean, Egyptian and Middle Eastern history is a fibered (layered) chronicle obtained by gluing together four nearly identical copies of a shorter original chronicle. The other three chronicles are obtained from the original chronicle by redating and renaming the events described in them; we rigidly move the original chronicle in its entirety backwards in time by approximately 333, 1053 and 1778 years. Thus, the full Modern Textbook can be reconstructed from its smaller part, namely from the original chronicle for the 9-17th cc. A.D. See Appendix 1, Figs. 101-104.
