Zillow Talk Spencer Rascoff, Stan Humphries, 2015-01-27 How do you spot an area poised for gentrification? Is spring or winter the best time to put your house on the market? Will a house on Swamp Road sell for less than one on Gingerbread Lane? The fact is that the rules of real estate have changed drastically over the past five years. To understand real estate in our fast-paced, technology-driven world, we need to toss out all of the outdated truisms and embrace today's brand new information. But how? Enter Zillow, the nation's #1 real estate website and mobile app. Thanks to its treasure trove of proprietary data and army of statisticians and data scientists, led by chief economist Stan Humphries, Zillow has been able to spot the trends and truths of today's housing market while acknowledging that a home is more than an economic asset. In Zillow Talk, Humphries and CEO Spencer Rascoff explain the science behind where and how we live now and reveal practical, data-driven insights about buying, selling, renting and financing real estate. Read this book to find out why: It's better to remodel your bathroom than your kitchen Putting the word cute in your listing could cost you thousands of dollars You shouldn't buy the worst house in the best neighborhood You should never list your house for $444,000 You shouldn't list your house for sale before March Madness or after the Masters Densely packed with entertaining anecdotes and invaluable how-to advice, Zillow Talk is poised to be the real estate almanac for the next generation.

Neighborhood Watch Joanna Green, Russell Walker, 2017 Read any news report on the housing market, and inevitably it will include facts or figures from the real estate data giant Zillow.com. The company initially set out to solve two key economic frictions in the real estate industry--information asymmetry and the principal-agent problem--by empowering users to access real-time housing data and eliminating the need for realtors. The company soon realized, however, that American homeowners and buyers were not willing to give up the traditional real estate agent model and changed course. In the end, Zillow decided to join--rather than replace--the middlemen in the real estate industry.

You Are Bigger Than Zillow® Scott Futa, 2021-08-23 As technology disrupts the real estate industry, how do you maintain client loyalty? In our virtual reality where likes, shares, comments, thumbs up, hearts, smiley face emojis and dislikes drive almost every aspect of communication--the basic principles of connecting are becoming a lost art. Where can you provide value with a human touch? What is the true measure of being a servant to your clients? The answer to these questions and more lie at the heart of You Are Bigger Than Zillow(R). Each of your clients are unique, they require varying levels of care, attention and nurturing. However, one common thread runs through all people, and that is the basic desire to be valued. Not only as clients, but as people--with real lives, real goals, real needs and real desires. In a digital world where our lives and our businesses are carried out over the little devices in our hands, showing our customers absolute loyalty is more important than ever (Yes--you owe them YOUR loyalty). Scott Futa outlines his systems and processes that have been proven to make a bigger impact than any website.

Zillow Group Report on Consumer Housing Trends 2017 Zillow Zillow Group, 2017-11-03 The Zillow Group Report on Consumer Housing Trends 2017 builds on the exploration Zillow Group did last year in how Americans rent, buy, sell and think about home. This year, we delved into the unique experiences and particular concerns of the substantial segment of the population that struggles with housing, and in the case of younger generations, faces headwinds as it turns toward homeownership. The revolution in finding and selling homes online is more than a decade old, and consumers are more empowered than ever to make smart decisions. Our hope is that the knowledge and insight in the Zillow Group Report on Consumer Housing Trends 2017 will take that effort a step further, toward a marketplace that's more equitable and more enjoyable for everyone.

Summary of Spencer Rascoff & Stan Humphries's Zillow Talk Everest Media,2022-05-16T22:59:00Z Please note: This is a companion version & not the original book. Sample Book Insights: #1 People still believe that buying a house is the best way to grow your money, even though the housing market has bottomed out and foreclosures are still on the rise. #2 According to data compiled by the World Bank, the US stock market is worth more than $18. 7 trillion. The housing market is even bigger, with estimates suggesting that the value of America's housing stock is more than $25. #3 The returns on real estate are better than stocks. The risks are lower, and the benefits are more significant. #4 The idea that young professionals should rent while happy families in the 'burbs should own is rooted in popular culture and the expectations of our family and friends. But our thinking about homeownership is mostly based on sentiment.

From Big Data to Big Profits Russell Walker,2015 Vast holdings and assessment of consumer data by large companies are not new phenomena. Firms' ability to leverage the data to reach customers in targeted campaigns and gain market share is, and on an unprecedented scale. Major companies have moved from serving as data or inventory storehouses, suppliers, and exchange mechanisms to monetizing their data and expanding the products they offer. Such changes have implications for both firms and consumers in the coming years. In From Big Data to Big Profits, Russell Walker investigates the use of internal Big Data to stimulate innovations for operational effectiveness, and the ways in which external Big Data is developed for gauging, or even prompting, customer buying decisions. Walker examines the nature of Big Data, the novel measures they create for market activity, and the payoffs they can offer from the connectedness of the business and social world. With case studies from Apple, Netflix, Google, and Amazon, Walker both explores the market transformations that are changing perceptions of Big Data, and provides a framework for assessing and evaluating Big Data. Although the world appears to be moving toward a marketplace where consumers will be able to pull offers from firms, rather than simply receiving offers, Walker observes that such changes will require careful consideration of legal and unspoken business practices as they affect consumer privacy. Rigorous and meticulous, From Big Data to Big Profits is a valuable resource for graduate students and professionals with an interest in Big Data, digital platforms, and analytics.

Disruptive Fintech James Deitch, 2019-12-16 Throughout history, innovators have disrupted existing financial services norms to change the landscape of the marketplace. Disruptive Fintech briefly traces fractional reserves, the creation of bank currency that traded at a premium to bullion value, central bank regulation, securitization of assets and loans, the current state of digital currency and electronic payments. The author then looks toward the future of fintech and the forces of disruption that will change the landscape of financial life as we know it. Using over 100 interviews with thought leading CEOs, this book develops a methodology to identify financial services that are ripe for innovation and discusses how innovative thinking can be used as a disruptive weapon to attack incumbents and create effective new fintech models. The book discusses How to relate historical innovations and disruptions in financial services to the current landscape How to follow a process to identify the threats facing incumbent processes and businesses, and how innovative thinking can be used as a disruptive weapon to attack incumbents and create effective new fintech models How many fintech innovations will be constructed by re-arranging or re-purposing existing core processes In this insightful book, author James Deitch, CPA CMB, argues that some of today's high-flying fintech innovators will flourish, but many may perish as the fire of innovation consumes those fintechs that are slow to monetize their promises.

Human-Algorithm Interactions Runshan Fu, 2022 Using bi-weekly snapshots of Zillow in three US cities, we document how home sellers and buyers interact with Zillow's Zestimate algorithm during the sales cycle of residential properties. We find that listing and selling outcomes respond significantly to Zestimate, and Zestimate is quickly updated for the focal and comparable houses after a listing or a transaction is completed. The user-Zestimate interactions have mixed implications: on the one hand, listing price depends more on Zestimate if the city does not mandate disclosure of sales information or if the neighborhood is more heterogeneous, suggesting that Zestimate provides valuable information when alternative information is more difficult to obtain; on the other hand, the post-listing update of Zestimate tracks listing price more closely in non-disclosure and heterogeneous neighborhoods, raising the concern that the feedback loop may propagate disturbances in the sales process. However, by leveraging COVID-19 pandemic as a natural experiment, we find no evidence that Zestimate propagates the initial shock from the March-2020 declaration of national emergency, probably because Zestimate has built-in guard rails and users tend to adjust their confidence in Zestimate according to observed market outcomes.

Deciding Where to Live Melissa G. Ocepek, William Aspray, 2020-10-16 Deciding Where to Live: Information Studies on Where to Live in America explores major themes related to where to live in America, not only about the acquisition of a home but also the ways in which where one lives relates to one's cultural identity. It shows how changes in media and information technology are shaping both our housing choices and our understanding of the meaning of personal place. The work is written using widely accessible language but supported by a strong academic foundation from information studies and other humanities and social science disciplines. Chapters analyze everyday information behavior related to questions about where to live. The eleven major chapters are: Chapter 1: Where to live as an information problem: three contemporary examples Chapter 2: Turning in place: Real estate agents and the move from information custodians to information brokers Chapter 3: The Evolving Residential Real Estate Information Ecosystem: The Rise of Zillow Chapter 4: Privacy, Surveillance, and the "Smart Home" Chapter 5: This Old House, Fixer Upper, and Better Homes & Gardens: The Housing Crisis and Media Sources Chapter 6: A Community Responds to Growth: An Information Story About What Makes for a Good Place to Live. Chapter 7: The Valley Between Us: The meta-hodology of racial segregation in Milwaukee, Wisconsin Chapter 8: Modeling Hope: Boundary Objects and Design Patterns in a Heartland Heterotopia Chapter 9: Home buying in Everyday Life: How Emotion and Time Pressure Shape High Stakes Deciders' Information Behavior Chapter 10: In Search of Home: Examining Information Seeking and Sources That Help African Americans Determine Where to Live Chapter 11: Where to Live in Retirement: A Complex Information Problem While the book is partly about the goal-directed activity of individuals who want to buy a house, and the infrastructure that supports that activity, it is also about personal activities that are either not goal directed or are directed at other goals such as deciding in which geographic location to live, personal entertainment, cultural understanding, or identity formation.

Zillow Stone and the Unholy One Brindi Quinn, 2014-12-23 In Eastern City, metropolis of wind and rain, a deadly game is about to begin . . . Beneath the boy's thumb, my blood bubbled in reaction to the implant. Hot stinging moved through my flesh for a helping of seconds before subsiding. The boy felt it too, for when it was done, he removed his thumb and inspected my hand. Beneath my skin was a green glow, roughly the size of a coin. It was done. Their people were born with extreme lust for ours, and just as my grandfather had warned all those years ago, one of them had come for me. I, Zillow Stone, had been marked by an unholy one. While I digested the truth of it, the boy leaned over, placing his lips nearly to my ear, and whispered, Run. Recommended for ages 16+

All Data Are Local Yanni Alexander Loukissas, 2019-04-30 How to analyze data settings rather than data sets, acknowledging the meaning-making power of the local. In our data-driven society, it is too easy to assume the transparency of data. Instead, Yanni Loukissas argues in All Data Are Local, we should approach data sets with an awareness that data are created by humans and their dutiful machines, at a time, in a place, with the instruments at hand, for audiences that are conditioned to receive them. The term data set implies something discrete, complete, and portable, but it is none of those things. Examining a series of data sources important for understanding the state of public life in the United States—Harvard's Arnold Arboretum, the Digital Public Library of America, UCLA's Television News Archive, and the real estate marketplace Zillow—Loukissas shows us how to analyze data settings rather than data sets. Loukissas sets out six principles: all data are local; data have complex attachments to place; data are collected from heterogeneous sources; data and algorithms are inextricably entangled; interfaces recontextualize data; and data are indexes to local knowledge. He then provides a set of practical guidelines to follow. To make his argument, Loukissas employs a combination of qualitative research on data cultures and exploratory data visualizations. Rebutting the “myth of digital universalism,” Loukissas reminds us of the meaning-making power of the local.
