Arvin's atheism Arvin Yonzon ,2023-06-25 Arvin's Atheism, an anthology is a fiercely subtle utterance of a budding virtuoso who is unafraid to talk about the problem that is generally hushed up in the fear of being stigmatized. Arvin's poems depict various states of mind struggling against the undulations of life. In short it is a protest against depression. The scars of depression are laid bare with his unapologetic truth and his poems read like scars. His poems many times crosses the threshold of the real world into the visionary realm. At times we find he extols death and depression. Arvin helps us in infer-ring the cause of depression and at the same time in highlighting what depression feels like with the usage of his colourful diction be it "purple", "silver", "grave red" or "red in blue". There is an undertone of helplessness and fear highlighting the societal ill with the help of imagery, sombre settings and juxtaposing ideas. The scars of depression leave most of us hiding our feelings in the darkest recesses of our hearts. In "Arvin's Atheism" we are delighted to see the poet muster up his courage to chronicle his heartache, helplessness and fear. In doing so the poet weaves a beautiful tapestry of various moods which in return as he admits become a panacea for those scars of his dystopian nightmare.
