Brickmakers Selva Almada, 2021-11-02 Two young men, Pájaro Tamai and Marciano Miranda, are dying in a deserted amusement park. The story begins almost at its end, just after the two main characters have faced off in a knife fight: the culmination of a rivalry that has pitted them against one another since childhood. The present in Brickmakers is a state of impending death, at moments marked by dream-like visions: Marciano is visited by the ghost of his father, who was murdered when he was a teenager, a father he had sworn to avenge, in a promise he could not keep. Pájaro is also visited, in a recurring nightmare, by his abusive father who disappeared years earlier. Narrated with fury and passion, reminiscent of William Faulkner or Katherine Anne Porter, Brickmakers is a rural tragedy in the great American tradition, a story of love, honour and violence where everything is at stake. Reprising the powerful imagery and the filmic landscape of The Wind That Lays Waste, and the threatening atmosphere of Dead Girls, Brickmakers is yet another proof of Almada's extraordinary talent.

Brickmakers' Manual R. B. Morrison, 1890

Subsidizing Capitalism Tamar Diana Wilson, 2012-02-01 In Mexico, self-employed brickmakers support capitalist enterprise by providing bricks to build hotels, factories, office buildings, and shopping malls at costs lower than those based on profit-making principles. Combining Chayanovian and neo-Marxist approaches, Subsidizing Capitalism asserts that the economic activities of these self-employed brickmakers may be considered counterhegemonic because they avoid proletarianization in the formal sector. Tamar Diana Wilson discusses the similarities between peasants and brickmakers, the structural position of garbage pickers in relation to brickmakers, the trajectory from piece worker to petty commodity producer to petty capitalist, the economic value of women's and children's work as part of the family labor force, and how the neopatriarchal household is intrinsic to petty commodity production. Interspersed throughout are short stories and poems that offer the brickmakers' perspectives and provide a rarely seen look into their lives.

Brickmakers' Manual (Classic Reprint) R. B.

Morrison, 2016-09-28 Excerpt from Brickmakers' Manual In sending out a book to find readers it is important that it be one that is instructive, or highly entertaining. There are many reasons for this. The principal reason is that books are so plenty and have become so cheap, that there are many good books begging for readers. Every field seems to be fully occupied in the domain of literature. Let us glance over it and see: History is a fertile, and at this day, a very productive field. History is being enacted every day, and all about us. The times are fraught with great events, and we do not lack historians. Scientific workers and writers are busy, and their name is legion in every branch of art, in mechanics, in agriculture, the scientist has been there with the alembic, the crucible and retort, and where the scientist has not been in pursuit of knowledge no man knoweth. Some of them have even peered into the glowing arches of the brick kiln; and in the scientific journals we read of the evolution of heat from combustion and its close relation to electricity; units of heat, the use of molten iron coatings, the vitrification of clays, etc., etc., which all goes to prove that progress has been made and greater results will follow. The poet has told his tale in verse, and we lack nothing in that line. And what a field of brambles and weeds is fiction! Look, now, at the field of Art and let us see what has been done for the brickmaker, as the making and burning of bricks is among the oldest of arts and in this particular branch of art there has been less written than any other. Books on brickmaking are scarce on the shelves of our libraries. There are few, indeed, who are engaged in the brickmaking business who have even a single volume to direct them, and nothing at all in most cases, except the circulars and catalogues of advertisers who have machinery to sell, and these describe the process and management each with his own particular machine, in a very brief way, and are usually very limited as to the process of making and drying; and burning is something with which they are usually not acquainted. The Brickmakers Rebecca Martin, 2013 Sixteen-year-old Peter strains his eyes down the mountain. Six painful weeks have passed since his minister father was rudely torn from his life by Anabaptist hunters. How will Peter and his family survive amidst the hardship, betrayal and persecution of sixteenth-century

European Anabaptism? Always hunted and ever moving, yet always trusting in God. Amidst the heartache, Peter turns prodigal. Will he turn back to the church of his father or will he follow the ways of the medieval world?

The Brickmaker's Bride (Refined by Love Book #1)

Judith Miller, 2014-09-30 In the clay-rich hills of the newly founded state of West Virginia, two families tentatively come together to rebuild a war-torn brickmaking business. Ewan McKay has immigrated to West Virginia with his aunt and uncle, promising to trade his skills in the clay business for financial help. Uncle Hugh purchases a brickmaking operation from a Civil War widow and her daughter, and it's Ewan's job to get the company up and running again. Ewan seeks help from Laura, the former owner's daughter, and he quickly feels a connection with her, but she's being courted by another man--a lawyer with far more social clout and money than Ewan. Resolving that he'll make the brickworks enough of a success that he can become a partner in the business and be able to afford to bring his sisters over from Ireland, Ewan pours all his energy into the new job. But when Hugh signs a bad business deal, all Ewan's hard work is put in jeopardy. As his hopes for the future crumble, Laura reveals something surprising. Can she help him save the brickworks, and will Ewan finally get a shot at winning her heart?

Children of the Labouring Poor Eileen Wallace, 2010

Chronicling the contributions children made towards their families' livelihoods in hard times, this detailed record catalogs the high price children had to pay--sacrificing their health and education--while employed in agriculture, chimney sweeping, straw-plaiting, silk-throwing, papermaking, and brick making in 19th-century Hertfordshire, England. This enlightening history demonstrates that the poor conditions in factories and mills, as well as in household chimneys, contributed to the many diseases and injuries that afflicted these young laborers. While there are examples of innovative manufacturers such as John Dickinson, who built respectable housing for his employees, the overall picture that emerges during this period is one in which Hertfordshire's children arduously struggled to make ends meet.
