Karl Dominic C. S. Constantine,2020-08-05 Underground writer of the most entertaining stories of the world passes away. His son comes forth about the truth of his father's life who, even though came up with the most successful stories, was bought by big movie directors who convinced him to sell his stories to them on minimum wage, which he did to support his family. His son explains to the world that his father helped everyone get over the old days of war by distracting them with high quality fantasy, which he doesn't plan on doing himself. His son will release five books about the true values of life and how a person should go about living his/her life, instead of providing a distraction, well-timed and received by the public, but no longer necessary from his part. During his college graduation speech from the University of Connecticut, young Karl Dominic, presents the world the first of his books and starts explaining the importance of believing in one's own capabilities to succeed, to do good and live a fair life. Eventually, Karl comes to learn the truth about the wheel of society. Will he lead a quiet life as a writer or will he try to take the wheel down and restore equality between the pillars of society?

Lying Crying Dying Dominic Martell,2020-10-06 Pascual is a marked man, lying low. In the 80s he was a courier for a network of radical groups that spread terror across Europe in the name of separatism and liberation. That is, until he defected to the Mossad and CIA, selling out his former comrades, save one-his old flame, the beautiful Katixa. Then he vanished along with his new identity into the streets of Barcelona, his childhood home. Cadging meals and sleeping in flophouses, Pascual spends his days trying to atone for his sins among the city's teeming alleys and taverns. He keeps a low profile, hiding from old associates who may be looking to exact revenge. But just when he thinks he's finally shed his past, Katixa bursts back into his life with a suitcase full of cash appropriated from the ETA, looking for a one-way ticket out of Spain-with Pascual. His better judgment doesn't stand a chance. To redeem both their lives, Pascual dusts off his old skills of subterfuge and deceit and goes on the run with Katixa, dodging ETA hitmen and the police in a nerve-wracking, headlong race for survival. But nothing is what it seems, and betrayals lurk at every turn. When Pascual realizes that Katixa is lying to him, can the crying and the dying be far behind?
