Cardinal Bishop, Inc. Jonathan Eeds,2009-10 Cardinal Bishop, finding himself friendless and penniless, starts a new business in the dilapidated Gunter Building. Although his business has no real plan or charter, or purpose for that matter, it does serve as a launching pad for a journey of self-discovery that takes him to the very depths of his soul, plus a few other interesting places. Along the way he learns what it means to love someone for a lifetime.

Brookside Review Michael Healy,Gigi Benson,Dan Eeds,Brenda Kahn,Edie Meidav,Jeanne Perkins,Mila Getmansky Sherman,Judith Silverstein,Linda Walls,2022-05-25 The Brookside Review, unlike the Paris Review, did not start out as a cover for a CIA cloak and dagger operation in Europe. Nor stealth in the San Francisco Bay Area. This collection is rather an outgrowth of the Brookside Writers Workshop, Berkeley, California. Flowing from eight different writers, these pieces range from short stories, vignettes, a mini-play, to prose poems, and personal essays. They take you on a magical ride through time and space touching on universal themes such as coming of age, perilous adventure in 15th century Caribbean, passion, time-travel murder, alienation, a canine mystery a la Sherlock Holmes, a dash of existentialism, and a philosophizing teapot. Each writer's unique voice emerges like a delicate butterfly from a cocoon where the life cycle begins with imagination, then word on paper, emerging with wings. The metamorphosis complete, or as the late workshop founder, Mae Meidav, would say, writing as: Transformation.

Miss Darkness Fredric Brown,2012-06-30 MISS DARKNESS collects the finest short crime fiction of Fredric Brown. Included in this generous collection are some hard to find gems, such as The Case of the Dancing Sandwiches, The Jabberwocky Murders and The Pickled Punks. Brown's reputation has not diminished over the years; in fact, his following has grown since his death in 1972. First editions of his books fetch hundreds of dollars, and even the vintage paperbacks fetch handsome sums. This is because his strong narrative voice and character driven stories read as fresh today as the time they were written. Better known for his crime novels (his first novel, The Fabulous Clipjoint, garnered an Edgar award) his short stories and novellas are in many ways superior. It is only that they are so difficult to track down that they are underappreciated. Time will eventually place Brown in the pantheon of revered American crime writers shared by Chandler, Hammett, Goodis and Cain. The publication of MISS DARKNESS marks the 40th year of Fredric Brown's passing and at last pays ample tribute to his treasured short fiction.
