My Decision to Live Nader Elguindi,2006-01-01 I remember the day so clearly, it feels like it just happened, I was lying in my hospital room and my vital signs were stable for the first time since the accident, eight days ago. I had lost ninety pounds and was a frail skeleton of my previous 180 pound frame. My body had gone through thirteen surgeries and I was still hazy from the morphine drip, but I was alive. As my thoughts became clear for the first time since the accident, I felt a great shift take place, a wave of positive energy. I was aware of where I'd been, where I was now, and what I needed to do - I was not only going to live, I was going to have my life back! Book jacket.
