Toxicology and Pathology of Repeated Doses of Monomethylhydrazine in Monkeys

Kenneth C. Back,Mildred K. Pinkerton,1967 The effects of daily repeated doses of monomethylhydrazine (MMH) were studied in monkeys. Groups of monkeys were given from 2.5 to 5 mg/kg MMH i.p. for a total of 23 doses. Other monkeys were given from 7 to 10 mg/kg MMH i.p. for up to 4 days. Baseline and weekly clinical laboratory measurements studied were complete blood count, serum glucose, alkaline phosphatase, and glutamic oxaloacetic transaminase. At the end of the exposures, necropsies were performed on all animals. Special studies included fat stains of fresh cryostat sections of heart, liver, and luxol fast blue stains of pons, cerebellum, basal ganglia, and insular cortex. Results of the experiments have delineated the limits of toxicity for MMH in primates, as evaluated by clinical chemistry, symptomatology, and pathological examination. Repeated doses of 5 mg/kg cause emesis and some convulsions when a total of 15 mg/kg was reached. Animals tolerated daily doses of 2.5 mg/kg for a total of 23 injections with no significant effects. Other animals tolerated 12 doses of 5 mg/kg per day after having received 5 mg/kg each day for 3 days and 2.5 mg/kg for 8 days or 95 mg/kg for a 4-week period. This experiment tends to negate a tolerance phenomenon. The most significant conclusions from the experiments are the relative lack of pathological (either anatomical or clinical) alterations seen in the acute intoxications and the extremely narrow limits between a no-effect and lethal dose level. Of extreme interest is the absence of kidney malfunction or renal pathology in these studies as contrasted by results seen in dogs at these dose levels. MMH causes marked renal damage in dogs.

Holy Water and Evil Spirits Katharina Wilkens,2011 In Tanzania, the Marian Faith Healing Ministry offers Catholic healing rituals under the patronage of the Virgin Mary. Exorcism and a special water service are central to the healing process. People bring physical, spiritual, and social afflictions before the group's leader, Felicien Nkwera. Combining the perspectives of the study of religions and medical anthropology, this book analyzes Nkwera's pastoral texts and the personal healing narratives of the members. Thus, a complex image of the healing process is created and framed within its Tanzanian interreligious context and its global conservative Catholic context. Mind, Cognition and Representation Paul J.J.M. Bakker, 2017-03-02 How can beliefs, which are immaterial, be about things? How can the body be the seat of thought? This book traces the historical roots of the cognitive sciences and examines pre-modern conceptualizations of the mind as presented and discussed in the tradition of commentaries on Aristotle's De anima from 1200 until 1650. It explores medieval and Renaissance views on questions which nowadays would be classified under the philosophy of mind, that is, questions regarding the identity and nature of the mind and its cognitive relation to the material world. In exploring the development of scholastic ideas, concepts, arguments, and theories in the tradition of commentaries on De anima, and their relation to modern philosophy, this book dissolves the traditional periodization into Middle Ages, Renaissance and early modern times. By placing key issues in their philosophico-historical context, not only is due attention paid to Aristotle's own views, but also to those of hitherto little-studied medieval and Renaissance commentators.

Distribution and Excretion of 14C-monomethylhydrazine Mildred K. Pinkerton, Edgar A. Hagan, Kenneth C. Back, 1967 A total of 20 mice, 20 rats, 17 dogs, and 16 monkeys received intraperitoneal injections of 14C-monomethylhydrazine (MMH) at doses of 22 mg/kg (mice), 15 mg/kg (rats), and 10 mg/kg (monkeys and dogs). At 2, 4, 8, and 24 hours after exposure, representative samples of approximately 20 tissues from each animal were processed for 14C assay using liquid scintillation counting techniques. Both blood and urine samples were simultaneously analyzed by a chemical colorimetric method for unchanged MMH, and the results were correlated with total 14C content. Results of the 14C assays indicated that the mouse, rat, and monkey excreted twice as much as the dog in the first 2 hours, and that all 4 species excreted 25-40% of the total dose by 24 hours after injection. Approximately 50% of the total 14C excretion, at all experimental times, was apparently unchanged MMH as implied by the colorimetric results. Tissue distribution of 14C showed the highest concentrations in liver, kidney, bladder, pancreas, and blood serum. Both clinically and pathologically, the dog was apparently much more susceptible than the other species tested to the toxic effects of MMH and to severe kidney damage.
