Contemplating Contemporary Thoughts: A Collection of 25 perceptive Poetries Dr. Malay R. Patel ,Khyati M. Patel,2019-02-04 This compilation was initially a private diary of some selected poems that I created for myself years ago. I collated my personal poetry diary along with my wife Khyati Patel's poetic work so that we could shape up this small poetic tome. The present book is compilation of 25 poetries which vividly describes our varied expressions and emotions, these creative expressions are penned down during different point of times in our lives, each poetry which we have penned here in this book has lot of memories attached to it, As a naive poets our poetries are quite simple and lacks deeply engrained imaginative genre of poetic styles, however we have tried to touched upon all the current human problems and lucidly express the same in our poetries. In our attempt to write this first poetry collection, our deepest expression of appreciation goes to our parents and our daughter Sprihaa whose unending affection helped in crafting these creative collections of meaningful lyrics. We are also grateful to Redshine Publication, for publishing these poetry collections in form of a book.

Mechanisms of Military Coatings Degradation - End of Fiscal Year 2000 Report Anthony Eng,Forrest Pilgrim,Malay Patel,2000-11-01 Although many distinguished scientists have studied the mechanisms of coating degradation and their relationship to service life, the need still exists to identify and elucidate these mechanisms in state-of-the-art military coating systems. Once accomplished, a predictive service life and life cycle cost can be optimally determined. In order to leverage this significant body of research and to comply with the multi-facility, tri-service, and academia- coordinated effort under the current Strategic Environmental Research and Development (SERDP) Mechanisms of Military Coatings Degradation task, Naval Surface Warfare Center, Carderock Division (NSWCCD), Code 624 will identify and characterize degradation in candidate military coating systems. The characterization will include accelerated- laboratory, static-field, and dynamic-field exposures via dynamic mechanical thermal analysis and density. In order to identify and conceptualize the mechanisms of degradation and to develop predictive service life models, the NSWCCD research will be combined with research at the Army Research Laboratory (ARL), the State University of New York at Stonybrook (SUNY), and the Naval Air Warfare Center (NAWC). ARL and SUNY are investigating chemical, transport, spectroscopic, and surface morphological phenomena, while NAWC is analyzing electrochemical and adhesion effects. A significant amount of data pertaining to the physical and thermal/mechanical properties at ambient laboratory conditions, as well as with the accelerated and static field exposures has now been collected and analyzed. Based on the duration of the exposures to date, curing effects rather than degradation effects have been observed and characterized.

Social Transformation of Indian Tribal Community N. Ravichandran,Malay Patel,2017 The case documents the evolution (2011-2016) of Tejas Eye Hospital (TEH) promoted by a not-for profit trust located in Mandvi, Surat district, close to a tribal community settlement in Gujarat state, India.In five years, the trust-based hospital has evolved as a vibrant community hospital. The trusts activities include: medical education, prevention of ophthalmological diseases by screening in camps, treatment, and need based rehabilitation and addressing the primary, and indirect healthcare needs of the community. However, in order to continue serving the medical needs of the community and expand, the board of trustees need to strengthen and refine its operating business model of the hospital.

Acid-Base Balance and Nitrogen Excretion in Invertebrates Dirk Weihrauch,Michael O'Donnell,2016-12-15 This textbook provides a comprehensive overview on the diverse strategies invertebrate animals have developed for nitrogen excretion and maintenance of acid-base balance and summarizes the most recent findings in the field, obtained by state-of-the-art methodology. A broad range of terrestrial, freshwater and marine invertebrate groups are covered, including crustaceans, cephalopods, insects and worms. In addition the impact of current and future changes in ocean acidification on marine invertebrates due to anthropogenic CO₂ release will be analyzed. The book addresses graduate students and young researchers interested in general animal physiology, comparative physiology and marine/aquatic animal physiology. Also it is an essential source for researchers dealing with the effects of increasing pCO₂ levels on aquatic animals, of which the vast majority are indeed invertebrates. All chapters are peer-reviewed.

BIOLOGICALLY ACTIVE COPOLYMERS Dr. P. Pazhanisamy & Dr. S. Bharathi,2021-01-28 1.1 Polymer The history of polymers goes back further than that of any other group of substances known to mankind. From the origin of mankind in the Garden of Eden, dependence was upon naturally-occurring polymers, for food, clothing, shelter and communication. On the contrary, the history of synthetic polymers is relatively short. It was only through the pioneering work of Staudinger and the quantitative studies of Carothers, the macromolecular concept was accepted. Long before this time, synthetic polymers were being produced and natural polymers were being altered chemically. Styrene was first polymerized in 1839 and in the same year the process of vulcanization of rubber was made successful. 1.2 Description and classification The word polymer was first used to describe compounds with the same composition but of different molecular weights. Berzelius defined polymer as 'many of a unit'. Carothers defined polymerization as a reaction that is functionally capable of proceeding indefinitely. According to IUPAC, a monomer is defined as 'a compound, consisting of molecules each of which can provide one or more constitutional units of a polymer or oligomer' and a monomeric unit or "mer" is the 'largest constitutional unit contributed by a single monomer molecule in a polymerization processes.

The Open Heart Lester R. Sauvage, 1998 This book is about what matters most in life and how to find it. It is about finding love and meaning in life. Through its pages a world renowned heart surgeon and research director and ten of his patients tell you from the depth of their souls what matters most in their lives. You will travel with the patients to the edge of life and then return to health with them. You will experience their joy as they open their spiritual hearts even wider in serving God by serving humanity out of love.

Nano Medicine and Nano Safety Malay K. Das, Yashwant V. Pathak, 2020-12-09 This book reviews the application of Nanobiotechnology in the development of Nanomedicine, while also discussing the latest trends and challenges in the clinical translation of Nanomedicine. Nanomedicine refers to the application of Nanotechnology to medicine and holds tremendous potential for achieving improved efficiency, bioavailability, dose response, personalized medicine and enhanced safety as compared to conventional medicines. The book first introduces readers to the basic concepts of Nanomedicine, and to technological advances in and applications of Nanotechnology in treatment, diagnosis, monitoring, and drug delivery. In turn, it reviews the current status of multi-functionalization strategies for using Nanoparticles in the targeted delivery of therapeutic agents. The book's third and final section focuses on the regulatory and safety challenges posed by Nanomedicine, including industry and regulatory agencies' efforts to address them.
