Bài tập nhóm Dân sự 1 Thương HLU,101-01-01 Đất đai là tài nguyên vô cùng quý giá, là tư liệu sản xuất đặc biệt, là thành phần quan trọng hàng đầu của môi trường sống. Nhờ có đất đai mà con người có nơi làm việc, sinh hoạt, vui chơi, tạo ra các sản phẩm để phục vụ cho nhu cầu vật chất và tinh thần của chính bản thân mình. Trải qua nhiều thế hệ, nhân dân ta đã tốn biết bao mồ hôi xương máu để tạo lập, bảo vệ vốn đất đai như ngày nay. Có thể nói, hiện nay việc quản lý đất đai nói chung hay xác định ranh giới đất đai nói riêng đang còn khá phức tạp, nguyên nhân chính là do người dân chưa hiểu biết rõ về Luật dân sự, Luật đất đai,... dẫn tới việc xảy ra các tranh chấp không đáng có. Để làm sáng tỏ vấn đề trên, Nhóm 3 xin được đi sâu phân tích một ví dụ cụ thể.

The Vietnamese City in Transition Patrick Gubry, Frank Castiglioni, Jean-Michel Cusset, Nguyen Thi Thieng, Pham Thuy Huong, 2010 Since the Doi Moi policy of economic renovation was introduced in 1986, Vietnam has undergone deep transformations as a result of the transition to a socialist-oriented market economy. Social and urban transition has taken place in parallel, as urban dynamics were spurred on by Vietnamese public and private stakeholders, and by external agents such as international organizations and international solidarity organizations, experts, consultants and Postcolonial Vietnam Patricia M.

Pelley, 2002-11-26 New nations require new histories of their struggles for nationhood. Postcolonial Vietnam takes us back to the 1950s to see how official Vietnamese historians and others rethought what counted as history, what producing history entailed, and who should be included as participants and agents in the story. Beginning with government-appointed historians' first publications in 1954 and following their efforts over the next thirty years, Patricia M. Pelley surveys this daunting process and, in doing so, opens a wide window on the historical forces and tensions that have gone into shaping the new nation of Vietnam. Although she considers a variety of sources—government directives, census reports, statistics, poetry, civic festivities, ethnographies, and museum displays—Pelley focuses primarily on the work of official historians in Hanoi who argued about and tried to stabilize the meaning of topics ranging from prehistory to the Vietnam War. She looks at their strained and idiosyncratic attempts to plot the Vietnamese past according to Marxist and Stalinist paradigms and their ultimate abandonment of such models. She explores their struggle to redefine Vietnam in multiethnic terms and to normalize the idea of the family-state. Centering on the conversation that began in 1954 among historians in North Vietnam, her work identifies a threefold process of creating the new history: constituting historiographical issues, resolving problems of interpretation and narration, and conventionalizing various elements of the national narrative. As she tracks the processes that shaped the history of postcolonial Vietnam, Pelley dismantles numerous clichés of contemporary Vietnamese history and helps us to understand why and how its history-writing evolved.

Wards of Hanoi David Wee Hock Koh, 2006 In this book, the author marshals evidence to support an arena-specific approach towards viewing Vietnam's state-society relations. In practice, the Vietnamese party-state's relations with society vary from the hard and uncompromising state, with the bureaucracy getting its way, to society's ability to negotiate the state's boundaries and regimes to make them less harsh. Any analysis of Vietnam's state-society relations needs to recognize and demonstrate both elements of dominance and accommodation, as well as specify the context in which either or both are seen. Alone, neither is adequate. In particular, the idea of the state needs to be disaggregated because state is not a singular actor that is coherent or uniform through time and space. To demonstrate how state-disaggregation can make our view more nuanced, this book analyses state-society interaction at the ward level of Hanoi, an urban local authority.

Nature-Based Solutions for Building Resilience in Towns and Cities Asian Development Bank, 2016-12-01 Urban populations are projected to increase from 54% to 66% of the global population by 2050, with close to 90% of the increase concentrated in Asia and Africa. Cities and towns--a growing source of greenhouse gas emissions--will need to address challenges posed by climate change. A nature-based approach in identifying climate change vulnerabilities and developing relevant adaptation options was conducted in three towns of the Greater Mekong Subregion. Working with local governments, nongovernment organizations, women's groups, and professional associations, town-wide adaptation measures were defined by overlaying climate change projections on town plans and zoning schemes for strategic infrastructure. This publication captures valuable experience and lessons from the project.
