Coal Camps of Sweetwater County Karen Spence McLean, Marjane Telck, 2012 In the early to mid-1900s, the coal camps of Reliance, Dines, Winton, and Stansbury emerged from the hillsides and desert in southwestern Wyoming due to the increased need for coal. The miners and their families who came to these coal camps were a true melting pot, bringing with them different races, religions, and customs from all over the world. They forged unique communities and worked and lived harmoniously, depending on one another for survival, entertainment, and camaraderie. Although distanced from one another, the camps were integrated by the mines and activities of the Union Pacific Coal Company, and unified by School District No. 7, which provided the educational foundation for their children. The people who lived in these camps contributed significantly to the development of southwestern Wyoming, the economy of the state, and the welfare of the United States during wartime.

Getting Incentives Right Robert D. Cooter, Ariel Porat, 2016-12-13 How tort, contract, and restitution law can be reformed to better serve the social good Lawyers, judges, and scholars have long debated whether incentives in tort, contract, and restitution law effectively promote the welfare of society. If these incentives were ideal, tort law would reduce the cost and frequency of accidents, contract law would lubricate transactions, and restitution law would encourage people to benefit others. Unfortunately, the incentives in these laws lead to too many injuries, too little contractual cooperation, and too few unrequested benefits. Getting Incentives Right explains how law might better serve the social good. In tort law, Robert Cooter and Ariel Porat propose that all foreseeable risks should be included when setting standards of care and awarding damages. Failure to do so causes accidents that better legal incentives would avoid. In contract law, they show that making a promise often causes the person who receives it to change behavior and undermine the cooperation between the parties. They recommend several solutions, including a novel contract called anti-insurance. In restitution law, people who convey unrequested benefits to others are seldom entitled to compensation. Restitution law should compensate them more than it currently does, so that they will provide more unrequested benefits. In these three areas of law, Getting Incentives Right demonstrates that better law can promote the well-being of people by providing better incentives for the private regulation of conduct.

Al Paschino Bob Del Nigro and the Unexpected Youth Oscar Bonamici, 2018-01-05 Al, widowed, and Bob, divorced, are two 60-year-old barbers who manage a barber's shop at Greenwich Village of New York. Don, a mafia boss under house arrest, is a regular customer of Al. One winter evening, Al and Bob watch a lottery drawing in their shop, along with another customer. The customer, out of joy for having won the lottery, dies from a heart attack. Al and Bob take possession of the ticket and leave his body in a street. After making some investments with the money, Bob goes to Las Vegas where he spends times in casinos and with escorts. Al, in Venice, falls in unrequited love with a girl who he calls Venetia. They return to New York and in order to escape boredom and because they have become proud, they decide to open a luxury salon. Venetia comes to New York to write her university thesis; she works as a manicurist at the shop to support herself. His house arrest finished, Don comes to the shop and offends Venetia. Al, who is cutting his hair at that moment, is about to stab Don in the neck with his scissors but is restrained by Bob, who pretends to take over Don's haircut from Al. He sends AL away to buy a dress for Venetia. Don, who has obviously understood the situation, calls his lieutenant to take care of the matter immediately. The lieutenant arms himself and goes to the salon, which has closed. Don sends his men to look for them. Al, Bob and Venetia go to the J.F.K. Airport. Bob and Venetia fly to Guatemala City and Al, unexpectedly, returns to New York. The morning after, AL shoots at Don from an apartment while he is about to have breakfast, but doesn't hit him. AL then flees to Guatemala City, where he discovers that Bob and Venetia have become lovers. Out of cynicism, he finds an escort. After they have sex, he falls in love with her. Bob and Al notice the presence of two hitmen and they succeed in assassinating the hired killers, but Venetia dies as well. The two friends blame each other for her death. After returning to New York, they hide in a junkyard, the owner of which is unjustly imprisoned because of Don. They learn that Don has put a bounty of a million dollars on their heads. As they are not capable of killing him on their own, they set a trap inside the junkyard so that Don and his men end up fighting with a Mexican gang. And, and, and ...
