Empress Farah (consort of Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, Shah of Iran)

Homesick Mosque Reza Jalali, 2013-11-13 "While he walked on the dim path next to the donkey carrying Zarin, Musa pondered his new fate. In the distance, the tall dark mountains stood with their jagged tops, puncturing the blue-black sky. With a fresh sadness, Musa reflected that on the Iranian side of the same high hills—the town where he was born, got married, and ran into trouble with the secret police—was also waking to a new day. He figured that, for years to come, probably till he died, he would miss the place and its people as he would move farther away, in opposite direction, with more mountains and oceans in between, to separate himself from his home. As they climbed a knoll, Musa stopped to survey a cluster of mud homes in a beehive-like village, surrounded by patches of brown wheat and barley fields, farther ahead. To his side, the donkey, with its head down and the beads jingling, blinked its long eyelashes to keep the unseen flies away. The tall plane trees, their tops touched by the glowing sun, stood solid like a wall. Somewhere in the still dawn, a man from an invisible minaret called the faithful to pray. A pair of hoopoes flew over their heads, heading east for the high hills. Musa watched them with a sudden longing." Excerpts from The Gravedigger.

The Poets and the Assassin Reza

Jalali,2016-03-12 The story of Iranian women, including their century-old battle for rights, remains with the few exceptions, untold. Though they have been in the forefront of the national struggle for independence, liberty and democracy in Iran, and have been among the most educated and most independent women in the Middle East-they entered universities in 1936 and gained the right to vote in 1963-to those in the West, their lives stay, for most part, in purdah, hidden and veiled in mystery. Ironically, their tale is one of courage, resistance, sacrifice, and survival in an intensely traditional and patriarchal society, for unlike some of their sisters, in countries near and far, they have actively participated in the public sphere to protest, ask for rights, and demand equality. A myth-buster, the play helps us see them for who they are: fearless shir-zan, fighting oppression and tyranny-a battle that can be ours, as well.

The Tragedy Of Death of ASA , The Tragedy Of Death of ASA, is a bloody and painful drama by Reza Taheri Bashar. From the opposite side, Abrand, Asa's son, is afraid of Parna and her son regaining power and wants to become the leader of the family. so..Both sides conspire against each other to destroy each other. This story shows the grudges and tensions and successive murders and the final fall of a noble family. Story: Parna, the leader of the noble family, has returned from the corner of the monastery to visit her warrior son at the insistence of her sister, Asa, but her only son, Bastab, hates her. The greedy Abrand , the general of the Iranian army and Asa's son, wishes to get rid of Parna and gain power and become leader, but Parna resists him and pulls him down and humiliates him. From the opposite side, Parna's vindictive ex-wife pulls her in the trap of Conspiracy illusion by her sister and plots to take her long-ago revenge on Asa and Abrand, and the story is getting closer and closer to disaster. until finally, endless grudges and conspiracies and murders emerge. This play is the story of conspiracy and complicity and spiteful. A conspiracy that kills each family member little by little. Who do we recommend to read this book? Those for whom original stories and good ideas and dialogues are important. Those who feel the value and importance of choice and authority with their flesh, skin and bones. Those who are interested in investigating the course of historical events and the deadly violence contained in it. Those who are tired of the old tragedies and want a powerful and different story. This story is a rare and truly different tragedy.

Mysteries of My Land Reza Baraheni, 2021-09-15
Hossein Tanzifi, a young English interpreter for American advisors in Iran, is caught at a crossroads when he witnesses the assassination of an American adviser by thirteen army officers. Hossein, who had no role in the incident, is sentenced to life in prison. Fourteen people were executed for the murder and he is the only one who knows what happened and who is covering it up.

Eighteen years later, during the Iranian revolution, Hossein is released from prison and while dodging his own murder, he searches for the one woman who can unveil the truth. The story, as told by this world-famous novelist, is a historical fiction, character-driven novel narrated from different perspectives. It weaves together the plights of characters from opposite hemispheres of the world. It is renowned for being the single most accurate depiction of the social atmosphere of Iran from 1959 to 1979 which led up to the overthrow of the Pahlavi dynasty under Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi through a popular uprising and its replacement with the Islamic Republic of Iran.

An Enduring Love Empress Farah (consort of Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, Shah of Iran), 2004-03-10
Farah Pahlavi has lived a life of extremes: a loving marriage to the Shah that ended with his death in 1980; a period of luxury in the court followed by years of exile and loss. Her story has been covered in the press and in countless books, but here she speaks out for the first time, and tells her own remarkable story. The only child of an Iranian army officer, Farah Diba was an architecture student in Paris when she became engaged and married the Shah. Pitched from her ordinary existence into a maelstrom of paparazzi and international attention, she quickly became an icon for her age—a beautiful, serene young woman, romantically married to one of the most powerful men in the world. She writes about her early years and about Iran itself and her profound love for it, of encounters with world leaders, of family life in the palaces of Tehran. She describes the divisions of Iranian society and the gradual shift of public opinion, fuelled by the rise in religious fundamentalism, which led to the sudden overthrow of the Shah in 1979. An Enduring Love includes a moving account of the year the Shah and his Queen spent wandering the globe, rejected from the United States and shuttling between Egypt, Morocco, the Bahamas, Panama, and Mexico. Farah Pahlavi details the years of exile after the Shah's death, as she rebuilt a life for herself and for her children in the United States. Written with an affecting simplicity and directness, this is both a powerful human document and a fascinating perspective on an especially turbulent period in Middle Eastern history.

Iran Gholam-Reza Sabri-Tabrizi, 1989 The author presents his childhood memories and his impressions of life in Iran from the 1930s to the Revolution of 1979, providing a social, cultural, and political history of a tormented nation.

Chasing My Dream of Socialism Reza

Yazdi, 2017-01-06 This is the first of three volumes entailing the memoirs of political activist Reza Yazdi in the period of political upheaval in Iran following the 1979 revolution, and the brutal suppression of political opposition groups by the new Islamic regime. Yazdi's narrative details the personal accounts of a man whose misguided dreams of socialism drew him to the Tudeh Party of Iran, in order to incite and organize the labor movement. As the Islamic government of Iran began to crush all opposing and non-Islamic political groups, including the Tudeh Party, Yazdi was arrested and spent a full year in an interrogation camp run by the Islamic Revolutionary Guard Corps before receiving a death sentence for his political beliefs, which was later reduced to a 20-year sentence of which he served 5 years in Vakil-Abad prison, in the northwestern city of Mashhad, Yazdi's hometown. Yazdi makes note of various clippings from publications run by activist groups, and their government counterparts in order to show the diverging narratives that tore the country apart. Nonetheless, the author's firsthand experience in grassroots political activism, and the story of his struggle to pave the road for socialism in Iran inform a detailed account of the interpersonal experience of Iranians in various political factions both within the government, and within opposition groups. Ultimately, Yazdi struggles with the disastrous end that came to leftist factions within Iran, marked by arrest and execution: namely, the mass execution of political prisoners in 1988, to which he bore witness.
