Intellectual Property and Development Rami M. Olwan,2013-03-15 The book examines the correlation between Intellectual Property Law – notably copyright – on the one hand and social and economic development on the other. The main focus of the initial overview is on historical, legal, economic and cultural aspects. Building on that, the work subsequently investigates how intellectual property systems have to be designed in order to foster social and economic growth in developing countries and puts forward theoretical and practical solutions that should be considered and implemented by policy makers, legal experts and the Word Intellectual Property Organization (WIPO).

Parametric Effects in a Two Level Electric Dipole System Stanford University. Microwave Laboratory,1961 In a two-level system with induced electrical dipole properties the relationship between an externally applied electric field and the expectation value of the dipole moment is expressed by a differential equation in which one coefficient is proportional to the instantaneous system energy. The nonlinear properties arising from this relationship allow parametric amplification of signals by pumping at another frequency, in the presence of a material containing active systems of this type. No population inversion is necessary. For optimum operation, both the pump and the signal should be within a few per cent of the natural frequency of the system. The electromagnetic Q required for parametric oscillations in a device of this sort is inversely proportional to the on-frequency absorption coefficient for the material. A numerical example shows that, at 1 millimeter wavelength, parametric oscillations will occur with a Q of 12,000 and a pump field of 10 kilovolts per centimeter in the gas. (Author).
