Reprisal Shefali Sharma, Abhishek Mohta, Shefali Sharma with Callre, 2017-12-09 The sun is overhead at a small town in Uttar Pradesh, and an 8-year old Ruchika is peeking through the jamb of the door out into the alley. Shh...stop crying! Ruchika whispers to Soni. Don't cry, Soni. Everything will be all right. She is scared from the wailing noises coming from a death procession out in the alley. A young boy from the neighbourhood had died and this has shocked everybody. He was laid down on a bed of bamboo sticks and carried by his friends. The boy's family is in mourning, particularly, the mother is grievous. Her loud cry resonates around the quiet neighbourhood that is usually quite busy during afternoons. The mother had been screaming hard all morning in disbelief and anger. It seems like her throat would be torn if she is not calmed. The sheer intensity of her vocal despair is scaring Soni a lot. Everyone from Ruchika's family has been at the funeral preparations since that morning, leaving Ruchika in-charge of Soni. Her curiosity to find out what is happening at the procession is peaking inside. So, she sneaks a peek every few minutes. It is evening and her family members have not yet returned. She is all alone and feeling scared as well. The lack of a functional street light outside her home is making Ruchika panic with fear. She makes sure that all the doors are shut tight and goes back to sit with her niece. While helplessly trying to distract Soni, Ruchika thinks of a scary tale often told to the crying children. Don't cry, Soni, please or the poltergeist will come, tells Ruchika but Soni continues to tear. In a desperate attempt to put an end to Soni's loud cry, Ruchika thinks of something funny, hey, poltergeist! Are you there? Come & meet my Soni. Unfortunately, this makes Soni restless and Ruchika does not understand why! She hears an automobile approaching her home and runs to the window to see if her family has returned. Regrettably, she cannot see clearly because it is pitch dark outside her home, except for the growing shadow of a rickshaw. She feels frightened of the darkness and takes a step back to shut the window. Maybe I should take Soni to my room and wait there until our family is back at home. She decides to go into her upstairs bedroom and believes that she will be safe over there. She collects Soni from the living room and makes her way to the staircase when suddenly, a strong gust of wind blows from behind and touches her back. She feels as if someone just grazed their fingers through her back. Even the hair on her neck stands up straight and she notices goosebumps all over the body. She turns around to see who it was and where is the wind blowing from? With the baby in her arms, she is terrified as she looks around the living room but finds no window or doorway open. As she takes her steps back to the stairs, the living room window bursts open and a dark shadow appears to grow bigger on the adjacent wall. Ruchika quickly recites a prayer and hugs Soni tightly to her chest. She does not want any harm to come to her niece. She then hears the strong winds from outside and a heavy voice resonating in the room. Ruchika is petrified! She screams many times before falling unconscious to the floor and the baby in her arms also slips out of her hands.

Changing Meat Cultures Arve Hansen, Karen Lykke Syse, 2021-12-06 Industrialization has made the meat supply chain quick, global, and largely invisible. But, as this collection points out, meat is a hotly contested foodstuff for reasons of sustainability, health, animal welfare, ethics, and climate change--

Methodological Approaches to STEM Education Research Volume 4 Peta J. White, Russell Tytler, Joseph Paul Ferguson, John Cripps Clark, 2023-09-21 The methodological explorations offered in this book (and indeed the book series) enable considerations of how research practices have profound implications for the purpose and nature of education. Methodological complexity and context specificity, along with a need to ensure research participant consideration, are revealed through thirteen chapters. These considerations continue to change the landscape of educational research, particularly in the areas of mathematics, health and environmental education research. The authors featured in this volume think critically about education research design and practice as part of a considered and robust discussion of education research theory and practice that will inform and shape education systems in the future. Chapters explore co-design with teachers, researching for system change, the ethics of 'netnography', principles and practices of literature review, and post-qualitative inquiry, with overviews and practices, arts-based and interdisciplinary methodologies, self-study and auto-ethnography.

Meathooked Marta Zaraska, 2016-02-23 Explores the world's meat cultures and traditions to share insights into why a craving for animal protein evolved in humans and why vegetarian lifestyles are so difficult to maintain despite health warnings.

Global Meat Bill Winders, Elizabeth Ransom, 2019-10-29 The growth of the global meat industry and the implications for climate change, food insecurity, workers' rights, the treatment of animals, and other issues. Global meat production and consumption have risen sharply and steadily over the past five decades, with per capita meat consumption almost doubling since 1960. The expanding global meat industry, meanwhile, driven by new trade policies and fueled by government subsidies, is dominated by just a few corporate giants. Industrial farming—the intensive production of animals and fish—has spread across the globe. Millions of acres of land are now used for pastures, feed crops, and animal waste reservoirs. Drawing on concrete examples, the contributors to Global Meat explore the implications of the rise of a global meat industry for a range of social and environmental issues, including climate change, clean water supplies, hunger, workers' rights, and the treatment of animals. Three themes emerge from their discussions: the role of government and corporations in shaping the structure of the global meat industry; the paradox of simultaneous rising meat production and greater food insecurity; and the industry's contribution to social and environmental injustice. Contributors address such specific topics as the dramatic increase in pork production and consumption in China; land management by small-scale cattle farmers in the Amazon; the effect on the climate of rising greenhouse gas emissions from cattle raised for meat; and the tensions between economic development and animal welfare. Contributors Conner Bailey, Robert M. Chiles, Celize Christy, Riva C. H. Denny, Carrie Freshour, Philip H. Howard, Elizabeth Ransom, Tom Rudel, Mindi Schneider, Nhung Tran, Bill Winders

What's the Matter with Meat? Katy Keiffer, 2017-05-15 It's been 111 years since the publication of The Jungle, Upton Sinclair's groundbreaking book on the cattle industry. Though improvements in animal welfare have been made since then, the industry has evolved to include issues Sinclair could never have foreseen. In What's the Matter with Meat, Katy Keiffer leads readers through a crash course on how this powerful multinational business has been able to generate such a bountiful supply of absurdly cheap animal proteins. What's the Matter with Meat? explores everything from labor issues to genetic manipulation to animal welfare to environmental degradation, illustrating just how the industrial model for meat production conjures up huge quantities of cheap meat even as it shifts many of the real costs onto the taxpayer. She describes practices few of us know about, such as land grabs in which predator companies acquire property in foreign countries for meat production, often driving out local farmers. She shows how industry consolidation entrenches cost-effective but harmful practices, creating monopolies that force competitors out of business, drive down labor costs, erode workers' rights, and exert extraordinary power over nearby communities. Keiffer demonstrates with irrefutable force that the current model for meat production—adopted worldwide—is simply not sustainable and will soon exhaust the planet's resources. A hard-hitting critique of the meat industry and its harmful effects, this book shows us just how important it is to care about where our food comes from, to support alternative production systems, and to stop those practices that are ruining our planet in the service of the burger and the nugget.

Women's Health in Autoimmune Diseases Shefali Khanna Sharma, 2020-07-28 This book focuses on conveying autoimmune disease expertise to gynecologists and other clinicians, allowing them to approach the treatment of each disease in a pragmatic manner. Each chapter reviews the current literature on treatments for autoimmune diseases, especially under special circumstances like pregnancy; rating disease severity; and providing practical guidelines based on the current state of knowledge. How autoimmune diseases affect fertility, and how to best prepare patients with these diseases for pregnancy, is also addressed. Unfortunately the current literature does not provide effective guidelines. This book addresses that shortcoming, and will help clinicians to implement appropriate treatments, while also outlining possible alternatives in order to provide effective treatment for women living with autoimmune diseases. It also explores important issues concerning autoimmune diseases in women such as: lupus nephritis, vasculitis, Sjogren's syndrome, anti phospholipid syndrome and systemic sclerosis, and their potential effects on unborn children. Given its scope, the book offers a valuable reference guide for Practicing Clinicians, Rheumatologists and Gynecologists, among others.

Litigating the Climate Emergency César Rodríguez-Garavito, 2022-10-31 As the climate crisis intensifies and becomes acutely visible, promising responses have been developed by scientists, advocates, and scholars around the world. Mobilizations such as #FridaysforFuture and Extinction Rebellion are converging with Indigenous peoples' movements and other social justice movements to convey the urgency and the scale needed for climate action. Reports by the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change, informed by developments in attribution science, establish more precise links between greenhouse gas emissions, extreme weather events, and human impacts. In the meantime, collaborations between scientists and journalists have drawn the broader public's attention to detailed information about the magnitude of planet-warming emissions associated with the activities of major fossil fuel companies--

Water, Rhetoric, and Social Justice Casey R. Schmitt, Theresa R. Castor, Christopher S. Thomas, 2020-01-20 Water, Rhetoric, and Social Justice: A Critical Confluence examines how individuals and communities have responded on a global scale to present day water crises as matters of social justice, through oratory, mass demonstration, deliberation, testimony, and other rhetorical appeals. This book applies critical communication methods and perspectives to interrogate the pressing yet mind-boggling dilemma currently faced in environmental studies and policy: that clean water, the very stuff of life, which flows freely from the tap in affluent areas, is also denied to huge populations, materially and fluidly exemplifying the currents of justice, liberty, and equity. Contributors highlight discourse and water justice movements in nonofficial spheres from activists, artists, and the grassroots. In extending the technical, economic, moral, and political conversations on water justice, this collection applies special focus on the novel rhetorical concepts and responses not necessarily unique to but especially enacted in water justice situations. Scholars of rhetoric, sociology, activism, communication, and environmental studies will find this book particularly useful.

Global Trade Greg Buckman, 2013-04-04 Trade, along with the free movement of capital, is at the heart of today's international economy. But international trade is an intensely political and contested subject. In this book, Greg Buckman details possible future directions in global energy supplies and balance-of-payments imbalances. He argues that, just as current trading arrangements have been the product of past decisions emerging out of apparently unrelated considerations, so factors like future fossil fuel costs, global warming, and the economic imbalances between North and South are likely to impel a radical reshaping of the WTO and the principles enshrined in its agreements as well as the global trading system in general. A key contribution to thinking about possible trade policy reforms are the reforms and alternatives - themselves not always agreed or sufficiently thought through -- advocated by the global justice movement. This book outlines these diverse proposals to make global trade more sustainable in some detail. This book has been written to be both informative and empowering. It is an important contribution to clearer thinking, more effective campaigning, and fundamental policy reform in the field of international trade.
