Color for Websites Molly E. Holzschlag,2003-04-21 Color is a subject that has fascinated humans incessantly. We want to explain color, to explore it, use it, enjoy it, be radical with it. Perhaps our fascination with color lies in the fact that it's elusive. We can't really explain it. What's more, the subjective, social, and cultural implications of color are so detailed that color remains confusing, complex, and therefore constantly interesting. Color for Websites came about to fill a gap existing in contemporary Web design books - and to celebrate the profound nature of color. While there's plenty of information about Color Theory, Web graphics, digital color for the Web, and color in a cultural context, there are no books to my knowledge that combine these topics in one place specifically for the Web designer, empowering that designer to make learned choices and execute them with skill, yet still maintain that original fascination.--Jacket.

Acts of Faith Philip Caputo,2006-05-09 Philip Caputo's tragic and epically ambitious new novel is set in Sudan, where war is a permanent condition. Into this desolate theater come aid workers, missionaries, and mercenaries of conscience whose courage and idealism sometimes coexist with treacherous moral blindness. There's the entrepreneurial American pilot who goes from flying food and medicine to smuggling arms, the Kenyan aid worker who can't help seeing the tawdry underside of his enterprise, and the evangelical Christian who comes to Sudan to redeem slaves and falls in love with a charismatic rebel commander. As their fates intersect and our understanding of their characters deepens, it becomes apparent that Acts of Faith is one of those rare novels that combine high moral seriousness with irresistible narrative wizardry.

La Calle Lydia R. Otero,2016-10-01 On March 1, 1966, the voters of Tucson approved the Pueblo Center Redevelopment Project—Arizona's first major urban renewal project—which targeted the most densely populated eighty acres in the state. For close to one hundred years, tucsonenses had created their own spatial reality in the historical, predominantly Mexican American heart of the city, an area most called "la calle." Here, amid small retail and service shops, restaurants, and entertainment venues, they openly lived and celebrated their culture. To make way for the Pueblo Center's new buildings, city officials proceeded to displace la calle's residents and to demolish their ethnically diverse neighborhoods, which, contends Lydia Otero, challenged the spatial and cultural assumptions of postwar modernity, suburbia, and urban planning. Otero examines conflicting claims to urban space, place, and history as advanced by two opposing historic preservationist groups: the La Placita Committee and the Tucson Heritage Foundation. She gives voice to those who lived in, experienced, or remembered this contested area, and analyzes the historical narratives promoted by Anglo American elites in the service of tourism and cultural dominance. La Calle explores the forces behind the mass displacement: an unrelenting desire for order, a local economy increasingly dependent on tourism, and the pivotal power of federal housing policies. To understand how urban renewal resulted in the spatial reconfiguration of downtown Tucson, Otero draws on scholarship from a wide range of disciplines: Chicana/o, ethnic, and cultural studies; urban history, sociology, and anthropology; city planning; and cultural and feminist geography.
