The Smartphone Video Toolkit Howard Hale, 2014-06-25 The 2014 Smartphone Video Toolkit 5 Steps to Creating High-Quality Videos Quickly By Howard Hale If you are new to video or filmmaking and you want to learn the basics quickly and affordably, then this book is for you. This book was originally designed for small business owners but works great for mobile journalists, educators, beginner filmmakers, or even family members who want to do a better job of capturing special moments. This book teaches you the fastest way to make high-quality videos and learn the process of shooting, editing, and uploading videos to YouTube by using a smartphone, iPad or mobile device. Life is short...hit record! Considering Video for your business, non-profit, family or just for fun? Video can be the most compelling part of your website. In seconds, a visitor can make the decision to use or not use your service, to buy or not buy your product. An engaging video can make all the difference in that decision and the same can be said for website or social assets. Creating and uploading videos is easier than ever before and videos have become an integral part of all businesses marketing their products or services online. Most business owners don't wake up in the morning and think, hey, I want to learn how to shoot, edit, and publish videos to YouTube. If you're like me, you're thinking about how you can get more business, fulfill the business you have, and keep your customers, clients or patients happy. Businesses that leverage video can create a competitive advantage capture a larger share of your targeted customers, clients or patients. Even today, most websites and videos are informative at best and don't ask the viewer to take a specific action or what's commonly know as a "call to action" statement. It's not hard to create videos today, but it's a process and it does require some thought to create a video that's not only engaging to watch but also makes a connection or impact with the person watching it. For most business owners, it's not likely that you'll want to create videos with fluffy kittens that go viral. And while those types of videos do go viral, you would be hard-pressed to create a connection with your audience. My goal and objective is the same for web development as it is for video creation. Connect and engage with your target audience and create a compelling story that incites them to engage with you, your brand, and your product or service. Can you really create quality videos in just an hour or two? Until now, hiring a video production firm has been quite expensive, takes a lot of time, and most videos have a shelf life of 6 to 18 months. In the past, creating videos has been out of reach of most businesses, even those businesses that have annual sales of $10 million have been hard-pressed to come up with the right resources to create a quality product. I'm not talking about just writing a check, I'm talking about human capital as well. Creating a quality video is just as much about telling your company story as it is about the technical aspects of creating a video. Having someone inside your company that understands your target audience and can speak to them on their terms is just as critical. No matter how great or small your marketing budget may be, I highly recommend that everyone interested in creating videos start by using a smartphone or some kind of mobile device. My book the SmartPhone Video Toolkit will guide you step by step through the process of creating great videos, using your smartphone or iPad!

Mobile Video Quality Metrics Amit Kumar, 2012-07 The video quality metrics are required in order to estimate picture quality for mobile or portable devices. The motivation of our research on mobile video quality is because of the recently emerging standard MPEG-4 Part 10 H.264/AVC (Advanced Video Coding), which is not only used for the mobile industry but also for portable multimedia devices. The estimation of video quality degradation in multimedia systems will help to maintain the quality of video. These quality metrics not only help improve the video quality but also to reduce the bandwidth where we have bandwidth constraint. There are two type of testing techniques, namely subjective and objective. In the objective scheme a practical approach has been taken into consideration and the results are computed via Matlab(r). We have worked on both techniques and we have made calculations of MSE, SNR, and PSNR and been able to correlate objective scores to subjective scores.

Mobile Video Communications Zhifeng Chen, Dapeng Wu, 2014-02 The problem how to convey maximum distinguishable video information while consuming minimum resources has long been investigated since Shannon's source channel separation theorem. The theorem is derived under the condition that all transmission errors can be corrected by the channel coding to an arbitrarily low probability. However, such a condition usually does not hold in a practical mobile video communication system given the limited resources, such as time, bandwidth, power and space. Therefore, the problem in a practical system can be formulated by Given the source, channel, resources and system structure, how to optimally control the system parameters to minimize the end-to-end distortion. This book first derives analytical models and designs estimation algorithms to accurately predict the distortion given random source and random channel. Solutions with low complexity are then provided to minimize the end-to-end distortion in different applications from codec level to cross-layer level given the resource constraints in the practical system. The target audience of this book includes PhD and graduate students, researchers in the field, codec and system design engineers.

Adaptive Transmission of Variable-bit-rate Video Streams to Mobile Devices Farid Molazem Tabrizi, 2011 In recent years, mobile devices have become more powerful in terms of computing power, memory, and screen size. This has resulted in increasing demand for multimedia services for mobile devices. In this thesis, we focus on two research problems of maximizing energy saving and maximizing ontime transmitted video frames in multicast/broadcast mobile video networks. We propose a novel algorithm to efficiently transmit multiple variable-bit-rate video streams from a base station to mobile receivers in wide-area wireless networks. The proposed algorithm transmits video streams in bursts to save the energy of mobile devices and adaptively controls the buffer level of mobile receivers. We have implemented the proposed algorithm as well as two other recent algorithms in a mobile video streaming testbed. Our extensive analysis and results demonstrate that the proposed algorithm outperforms recent algorithms and it results in higher energy saving for mobile devices and fewer dropped video frames.
