And especially not another SEAL. Cass has a bone to pick with longtime friend, Tony. After her husband died, he was the closest thing her little boy had to a father figure. His visits stopped abruptly and her son doesn't understand why. Neither does she. She's also unable to quench her growing need for the tough and tender man. She's already loved and lost one SEAL, but that doesn't stop her from burning for Nero. Catching Eagle's Eye SEAL sniper, Dane Sawyer, is known as Eagle Eye for his deadly aim. He's also good at

But a man can't train for luck, so preserving his "Midas touch" good fortune is something he takes seriously. He'll go to extreme measures to get his team on-board with his pre-mission, luck-assuring routines, even if it means accepting a challenge. Get the sexy but uptight teacher, who blocks his advances at every turn, to the rock concert a week from today, and they'll comply. With a crazy rock star dad and top supermodel mom, Angie Summers was once a wild child but, wanting more out of life, has done her best to live under the radar of fame. She's even assumed a secret identity and found a job teaching at Naval Station Rota, Spain. Her attempt at a "normal" life is quickly turned on its ear when a hot-as-hell Navy SEAL sweet talks her into a date she'll never forget and may eventually regret. While spending time with the muscle-bound sailor unleashes Angie's need to let the wild child out to play, which could threaten her anonymity, Midas finds himself on the precipice of breaking the first rule of luck—never fall for a woman.
