India On Television Nalin Mehta, 2009-01-27 'Excellent...an incisive and much needed study of how television is changing India.' - Rajdeep Sardesai, Managing Editor, CNN-IBN and IBN-7 More than fifty 24-hour news networks, operating in eleven different languages, emerged in India between 1992 and 2006. This book traces the evolution of satellite television and how it effected major changes in political culture, the state, and expressions of Indian nationhood. Explaining how television, a medium that developed in the industrial West, was adapted to suit Indian conditions, the book focuses specifically on the emergence of satellite news channels. It shows how live television used new forms of technology to plug into existing nodes of communication, which in turn led to the creation of a new visual language - national, regional and local - that altered politics and forms of identity formation in significant ways. Satellite television came to India as the representative of global capitalism in the early 1990s and crushed the governmental monopoly over broadcasting that had existed since independence. As such, the story of satellite news is also the story of India's encounter with the forces of globalisation. 'Accumulated with an insider's knowledge...a genuine contribution to the literature, bringing together valuable material that deserves a wide audience.' - Prof. Arvind Rajagopal, author of Politics After Television.

The Rise of 24-hour News Television Stephen Cushion, Justin Lewis, 2010 De-westernising journalism studies in an intelligent way, this book deserves to be read around the world. --- Professor James Curran, Goldsmiths, University of London, United Kingdom --

Prime Time Soap Operas on Indian Television Shoma Munshi, 2012-07-26 This book focuses on 'urban family soaps' on television and analyses them as an important resource for anthropological insights into contemporary social issues and practices. It studies the 'popular' and 'everyday' while also concentrating on the middle class.

India on Television Alistair Maclean, Nalin Mehta, 2008 Satellite television came to India as the representative of global capitalism in the early 1990s and crushed the governmental monopoly over broadcasting that had existed since independence. This work tells the story of satellite news that is also the story of India's encounter with the forces of globalism.

South Asia in the New Decade Amitendu Palit, Gloria Spittel, 2013 At the beginning of the second decade of the new millennium, South Asia has emerged as a key regional variable in the contemporary global order. The last decade saw the region experiencing a robust phase of economic growth and development. Over time, South Asia's economic progress is expected to accelerate, given its favourable demography and strategic location. The prospects of faster economic growth and development, however, will materialize depending upon the region's success in handling various challenges including security, climate change, political instability and ethnic strife. It is in this context that the Sixth International Conference on South Asia brought together academics and policy specialists to provide insights and contribute to an understanding of the challenges and prospects facing the region in the new decade. This volume is a collection of the papers presented at the Conference and assembles a large and diverse set of viewpoints and perceptions on the region.

Broadcasting in India Probhat Chandra Chatterji, 1991 A comprehensive and analytical account of the development and structure of broadcasting in India, this classic text is now into its second edition. The book has been extensively revised and updated in the light of three significant developments in the post 1987 period, namely the cry for media autonomy, the screening of epic serials, and the onset of the era of the VCR and cable television.

Screening Culture, Viewing Politics Purnima Mankekar, 1999 An ethnography of urban women television viewers in India, and their reception of particular shows, especially in relation to issues of gender and nation.

Television in India Nalin Mehta, 2008-06-03 This book examines the development of television in India since the early 1990s, and its implications for Indian society more widely. Until 1991, India possessed only a single state-owned television channel, but since then there has been a rapid expansion in independent satellite channels which came as a complete break from the statist control of the past. This book explores this transformation, explaining how television, a medium that developed in the industrial West, was adapted to suit Indian conditions, and in turn has altered Indian social practices, making possible new ways of imagining identities, conducting politics and engaging with the state. In particular, satellite television initially came to India as the representative of global capitalism but it was appropriated by Indian entrepreneurs and producers who Indianized it. Considering the full gamut of Indian television - from national networks in English and Hindi to the state of regional language networks - this book elucidates the transformative impact of television on a range of important social practices, including politics and democracy, sport and identity formation, cinema and popular culture. Overall, it shows how the story of television in India is also the story of India's encounter with the forces of globalisation.

Television at Large in South Asia Aswin Punathambekar, Shanti Kumar, 2015-09-25 This book explores the empirical and theoretical significance of understanding television as a dynamic technology, a creative industry, and a vibrant cultural form that is at large in South Asia. Bringing together prominent scholars who have shaped television studies in South Asia, as well as emerging scholars who address new topics, this book decisively positions television as a key site in the study of South Asian History and Culture. In doing so, it also positions the study of television in South Asia and the South Asian diaspora as crucial in the rethinking of global television history and opens up new directions for the future of television studies. This volume will be essential reading for scholars and teachers of media and communication studies, media history, anthropology, and sociology, besides being of great interest to policymakers and media professionals. This book was originally published as a special issue of South Asian History and Culture.

Indian Silver Screen Dr. Paramveer Singh, 2021-08-05 Indian Silver Screen Television in India has been a medium of entertainment as well as social and economic awareness. It was started under government control as a medium of social awareness, but now this medium has become an industry. There was a time when Doordarshan was the only channel on television in India, but today, hundreds of channels broadcast programs day and night. In India today, there are many channels based on sports, news, film, documentary, and music. There was a time when television programs could be viewed only through television sets, but today, through devices such as computers, laptops, and mobiles, viewers can watch their favorite programs at their convenient location, and time. The main objective of this book written on Indian television is to make students aware of the history and status of Indian television. The book begins with the story of the introduction of television in various countries. It describes the development of television in Britain, America, Australia, China, Africa, and other countries of the continent of Asia. After this, the early experiments, projects, and history and current status of television in India are told. Many of the chapters in the book are about the major television business groups in India that have deep penetration into the Indian television industry. The book also introduces programs that have become famous in India, which have proved to be milestones in Indian television history and reached heights of popularity. Apart from this, the book describes the laws of India which have been implemented to control the television industry. A chapter in the book is written about various television broadcasting techniques practiced in the country. Apart from this, there is a chapter about Direct to Home, which tells the story of the development of DTH in India. Television rating points determine the popularity of television channels and programs. The book introduces various agencies and institutions that determine TRP in India. In addition to this, the history of television journalism in India has also been discussed. A chapter about television journalism in various languages of India such as Hindi, Punjabi, Gujarati, Marathi, Tamil, Telugu, Kannada, Malayalam, Bengali, and Assamese is described in detail. The last chapter of the book discusses various international television channels that are broadcasting in India.
