The Prepper's Medical Handbook M. D. Forgey,2020-04-01 The basis of adequate prepping is being prepared for both common and dire events that may occur under the worst of all possible circumstances. These circumstances might include the breakdown in normal emergency support services (such as calling 911), the lack of an ability to obtain additional supplies, and the probability that you will not be able to rely on anyone but members of your immediate group or yourself. Prepping requires forethought with regard to food, water supplies, power, and protection – all areas of significant technical preparation. Self-reliant medical care is no exception. This book provides the basis of prevention, identification, and long-term management of survivable medical conditions and can be performed with minimal training. It helps you identify sources of materials you will need and should stock-pile, it discusses storage issues, and directs you to sources for more complex procedures that require advanced concepts of field-expedient techniques used by trained medical persons such as surgeons, anesthesiologists, dentists, or midwives and obstetricians.

The Survival Triangle: Fire Bryan Foster aka Zion Prepper, Nicole Foster, 2014-10-28 See my other books which include the Ebola Survival Guide, Sheltering-In-Place, The Prepper's Handbook - Second Edition, The Christian Prepper's Handbook - Second Edition, and The Prepper's Survival Guide - An Introduction to Prepping and a Guide to Fire. Fire, water, food, shelter, and self-preservation. These are The Survival Triangle(c) elements. These elements, if properly prepared, will keep you alive in a manmade or natural disaster. But which one is the most important? The answer is FIRE . Fire provides heat and light, which are used for many things, including cooking, keeping warm, killing parasites in water, sterilizing wounds, warding off danger, lighting a path, signaling for help, calming bees, and so much more. If you don't believe that Fire is the most important element, look no further than Superstorm Sandy in November 2012. Parts of the east coast received over twelve inches of snow overnight. Over 8,100,000 households lost power, affecting people in 17 states. Many were without power for days and even weeks. Or consider that when you go camping, one of the first things you do is start a fire. Now, imagine that matches, lighters, and wood were not available. Or what if you had to start a fire in the snow or using wet material? What would you do? Preppers are ready for the unknown, and being able to create fire in a Shit-Hits-The-Fan (SHTF) scenario is the number one priority. Can you say the same? Regardless of your answer, The Prepper's Survival Guide on Fire provides information for both the beginning and advanced prepper
