App Kid Michael Sayman,2022-08-30 An inspiring and deeply personal coming of age memoir from one of Silicon Valley's youngest entrepreneurs—a second-generation Latino immigrant who taught himself how to code as a thirteen-year-old and went on to claim his share of the American dream. As his parents watched their restaurant business collapse in the wake of the Great Recession, Michael Sayman was googling “how to code.” Within a year, he had launched an iPhone app that was raking in thousands of dollars a month, enough to keep his family afloat—and in America. Entirely self-taught, Sayman headed from high school straight into the professional world, and by the time he was seventeen, he was Facebook’s youngest employee ever, building new features that wowed its founder Mark Zuckerberg and are now being used by more than half a billion people every day. Sayman pushed Facebook to build its own version of Snapchat’s Stories and, as a result, engagement on the platform soared across all demographics. Millions of Gen Z and Millennials flocked to Facebook, and as teen engagement rose dramatically on Instagram and WhatsApp, Snapchat’s parent company suffered a billion-dollar loss in value. Three years later, Sayman jumped ship for Google. App Kid is the galvanizing story of a young Latino, not yet old enough to drink, who excelled in the cutthroat world of Silicon Valley and went on to become an inspiration to thousands of kids everywhere by following his own surprising, extraordinary path. In this candid and uplifting memoir, Sayman shares the highs and lows, the successes and failures, of his remarkable journey. His book is essential and affirming reading for anyone marching to the beat of their own drum.

Mobile Apps for Kids Federal Trade Commission,2014-05-23 In February 2012, Federal Trade

Commission (FTC) staff issued a report on a survey of mobile “apps” offered for children in Apple's App Store and Google's Android Market, the two largest U.S. app stores. The report, Mobile Apps for Kids: Current Privacy Disclosures are Disappointing, found that little or no information was available to parents about the privacy practices and interactive features of the mobile apps surveyed prior to download. As a result, the report called on all members of the kids' app ecosystem – app stores, developers, and third parties that interact with the apps – to provide greater transparency about the data practices and interactive features of apps geared to children. The report stated that FTC staff would conduct a follow-up survey in six months to evaluate whether and how industry had addressed the concerns raised. FTC staff conducted its follow-up survey during the summer of 2012. Like the first survey, the new survey examined the disclosures that apps provided about their privacy practices and interactive features, such as links to social media. However, the new survey went a step further by testing the apps' practices and comparing them to the disclosures made. Specifically, the new survey examined whether the apps included interactive features or shared kids' information with third parties without disclosing these facts to parents. The answer: Yes, many apps included interactive features or shared kids' information with third parties without disclosing these practices to parents. Since issuing the first kids' app report, the Commission has continued to promote consumer protections in mobile technologies by engaging in a host of policy, enforcement, and educational initiatives. Additionally, other government agencies, including the California Attorney General and the U.S. Department of Commerce, have launched efforts to increase transparency in the mobile marketplace, and several trade associations have issued self-regulatory guidelines or launched initiatives regarding mobile app privacy and related issues. Likewise, Apple and Google recently announced changes to their app stores that may address concerns about the failure to post privacy policies and the transmission of personal information by apps.
