Meet Grindr Jaime Woo,2013 What if an app gave X-ray vision to see the people around you, through the steel and brick and sometimes their clothes? What if you could communicate with them as if through telepathy so that no one else knew? Welcome to Grindr, which uses the Gps capabilities on smartphones to help its five million users discover users nearby to meet. Meet Grindr illuminates the new world of meeting online, exploring its ups and downs. How is Grindr more addictive than slot machines? Why are users like jars of jam? What if Grindr is actually a game, and should it be more of a team sport? Meet Grindr uncovers surprising answers and explores where design subtly influences users, how users could make better connections, and why Grindr has changed the way people connect.

History and Development of Surf Clam Harvesting Gear Phillip S. Parker,1971 The development of harvesting gear for [Atlantic] surf clams, Spisula solidissima, along the eastern coast of the United States is reviewed from early times up to the present. Early clamming was done by hand using rakes or tongs, while today the industry depends upon large, efficient dredges operating from stable vessels. Little gear development took place prior to World War II; however, since that time, the industry has made rapid strides in the development of harvesting gear. Today this trend is still very much in evidence, with gear constantly being modified for adaption to newer vessel types. Most gear development work has been the result of the surf clam industry itself. However, the Federal Government, in cooperation with the industry, has developed several pieces of equipment for adaptation to clamming gear.

Reality Mining Nathan Eagle,Kate Greene,2014-08-08 A look at how Big Data can be put to positive use, from helping users break bad habits to tracking the global spread of disease. Big Data is made up of lots of little data: numbers entered into cell phones, addresses entered into GPS devices, visits to websites, online purchases, ATM transactions, and any other activity that leaves a digital trail. Although the abuse of Big Data—surveillance, spying, hacking—has made headlines, it shouldn't overshadow the abundant positive applications of Big Data. In Reality Mining, Nathan Eagle and Kate Greene cut through the hype and the headlines to explore the positive potential of Big Data, showing the ways in which the analysis of Big Data (“Reality Mining”) can be used to improve human systems as varied as political polling and disease tracking, while considering user privacy. Eagle, a recognized expert in the field, and Greene, an experienced technology journalist, describe Reality Mining at five different levels: the individual, the neighborhood and organization, the city, the nation, and the world. For each level, they first offer a nontechnical explanation of data collection methods and then describe applications and systems that have been or could be built. These include a mobile app that helps smokers quit smoking; a workplace “knowledge system”; the use of GPS, Wi-Fi, and mobile phone data to manage and predict traffic flows; and the analysis of social media to track the spread of disease. Eagle and Greene argue that Big Data, used respectfully and responsibly, can help people live better, healthier, and happier lives.

Dengede Kal Bekir AYAZ, İnsan bu dünya yaşantısında da ahiret ile ilgili hazırlıklarında da dengeli olmak durumundadır. Dünyada yaşarken çalışalım, çabalayalım, malımız, mülkümüz, evladımız, eşimiz olsun. Ancak bu dünya ahireti kazanmamıza vesile olsun. Ahireti kazanmaya vesile olmayan bir dünya hayatı bizi dengede koymaz. Dengede kalmak için hiç ölmeyecekmiş gibi dünya için yarın ölecekmiş gibi ahiret için çalışalım.

Schools of Life (Common Front) Sardón Gall,2021-05-28 People, as social beings, are forced to establish relationships with their peers, whether in the family, educational, work or leisure environment. However, it is not always easy to function in a certain social context. And it is not due to a lack of skills, but because the necessary skills to do so have not been acquired. Definitions that illustrate the meaning of skills are many. Some authors refer to them as the skills to conduct oneself through life skillfully and competently , within the social and cultural possibilities of each one: they act as a link between the factors that motivate knowledge , attitudes and values ; they promote the generation of protective factors against psychosocial problems derived from the environment; and they help you to know how to face the demands and challenges that life puts before you. In general, three classes of skills are identified: social or interpersonal (such as assertive communication or empathy), cognitive (such as decision-making or critical thinking) and skills for managing emotions (such as stress). According to the WHO, the skills for daily life are the following: 1. Self-knowledge . Ability to know oneself, to know one's own strengths, weaknesses, attitudes, values and personal and social resources that one has for life and to face adversity. It is discovering what you want and what you don't. 2. Management of emotions and feelings . The ability to explore your own emotions and know how to manage them influences people's behavior. Those that are more difficult to handle, such as anger and violence, can have harmful results for health, especially in the youngest. 3. Managing tension and stress . It is the ability to recognize life circumstances that cause stress to deal with them constructively and eliminate or reduce them in a healthy way. 4. Assertive communication . Ability to clearly express what you think, feel or need, affirming your own rights, without allowing yourself to be manipulated or manipulated by others. It is the most efficient form of communication. 5. Empathy . The ability to imagine what another person's life is like and what they feel and put oneself in their shoes to better understand their reactions, emotions, and opinions. Having empathy helps to accept diversity and improves interpersonal relationships. Being empathic also involves your own emotions: if you feel what others feel, it is because you share feelings. 6. Interpersonal relationships . Ability to establish and maintain interpersonal relationships to interact positively with people around them, especially family, and, at the same time, end relationships that are toxic, that is, that block their own personal growth. 7. Conflict management . Accepting that conflict is part of the human condition, the challenge is to develop constructive strategies, that is, to help manage them in a way that encourages development and favors change and personal growth. This ability, in young people, helps reduce anxiety. 8. Decision making . The ability to choose helps to evaluate the possibilities and to take into account the consequences associated with choices, both on oneself and on the people in the environment. 9. Creative thinking . In order to make decisions and solve conflicts, it is necessary to explore all the alternatives and consequences, beyond one's own personal experience. 10. Critical thinking . It is the ability that allows an objective analysis of the available information together with the experience to reach its own conclusions. This helps young people to recognize what factors influence their behavior, such as the media or their peer group. This book was created with the sole intention of entertaining, without further pretense. Do not look at the technical or scientific content, because there is none.

Modern Romance Aziz Ansari,Eric Klinenberg,2016-06-14 The #1 New York Times Bestseller "An engaging look at the often head-scratching, frequently infuriating mating behaviors that shape our love lives." —Refinery 29 A hilarious, thoughtful, and in-depth exploration of the pleasures and perils of modern romance from Aziz Ansari, the star of Master of None and one of this generation's sharpest comedic voices At some point, every one of us embarks on a journey to find love. We meet people, date, get into and out of relationships, all with the hope of finding someone with whom we share a deep connection. This seems standard now, but it's wildly different from what people did even just decades ago. Single people today have more romantic options than at any point in human history. With technology, our abilities to connect with and sort through these options are staggering. So why are so many people frustrated? Some of our problems are unique to our time. "Why did this guy just text me an emoji of a pizza?" "Should I go out with this girl even though she listed Combos as one of her favorite snack foods? Combos?!" "My girlfriend just got a message from some dude named Nathan. Who's Nathan? Did he just send her a photo of his penis? Should I check just to be sure?" But the transformation of our romantic lives can't be explained by technology alone. In a short period of time, the whole culture of finding love has changed dramatically. A few decades ago, people would find a decent person who lived in their neighborhood. Their families would meet and, after deciding neither party seemed like a murderer, they would get married and soon have a kid, all by the time they were twenty-four. Today, people marry later than ever and spend years of their lives on a quest to find the perfect person, a soul mate. For years, Aziz Ansari has been aiming his comic insight at modern romance, but for Modern Romance, the book, he decided he needed to take things to another level. He teamed up with NYU sociologist Eric Klinenberg and designed a massive research project, including hundreds of interviews and focus groups conducted everywhere from Tokyo to Buenos Aires to Wichita. They analyzed behavioral data and surveys and created their own online research forum on Reddit, which drew thousands of messages. They enlisted the world’s leading social scientists, including Andrew Cherlin, Eli Finkel, Helen Fisher, Sheena Iyengar, Barry Schwartz, Sherry Turkle, and Robb Willer. The result is unlike any social science or humor book we’ve seen before. In Modern Romance, Ansari combines his irreverent humor with cutting-edge social science to give us an unforgettable tour of our new romantic world.
