Ship Repair Project Manager's Guide Mohamed Khamis,2018-06-19 Marine Traffic facilitates much of the world's trade; the marine traffic sector is influenced by many factors that affect its operations, development and direction. That factors such as shipbuilders, classifications societies, ship owners, ship management, ship chandlers, ship suppliers, ship operators, port & port facilities, ship agency and ship repair yards. The ship repair activities are considered the heart & the focus interest of any ship yard which are affected on marine traffic sectors as I had mentioned above. The main purpose of this guide book is to make available to all ship repair yard managements and their ship repair managers (SRM) a ready reference, Ship repair yard management should be considered the role of the ship repair managers as very important to keeping in his mind that he is the yard representative towards ship owner in the project he is handling. To assist all new ship repair managers in performing their daily activities, I have written this guide book based on my own practical work experiences, in order to guide them for a proper way of the project management in marine traffic sectors.

Vessel Traffic Systems Charles W. Koburger,1986 Vessel traffic control systems operate today in perhaps as many as 250 bodies of water throughout the world. The function of a VTS is to increase safety, to accommodate a greater flow of traffic, and to protect the environment. It generally includes some means of area surveillance, a traffic separation scheme, perhaps a vessel movement reporting scheme, a traffic center and, of necessity, some method of enforcement.

Minding the Helm Division on Engineering and Physical Sciences,Commission on Engineering and Technical Systems,Marine Board,1994-01-01 Large ships transporting hazardous cargoes, notorious marine accidents, and damage to marine ecosystems from tanker spills have heightened public concern for the safe navigation of ships. This new volume offers a complete, highly readable assessment of marine navigation and piloting. It addresses the application of new technology to reduce the probability of accidents, controversies over the effectiveness of waterways management and marine pilotage, and navigational decisionmaking. The book also explores the way pilots of ships and tugs are trained, licensed, and held accountable. Minding the Helm approaches navigational safety from the perspectives of risk assessment and the integration of human, technological, and organizational systems. Air and marine traffic regulation methods are compared, including the use of vessel traffic services. With a store of current information and examples, this document will be indispensable to federal and state pilotage and licensing authorities and marine traffic regulators, the Coast Guard, pilot associations, and the shipping and towing industries. It will also interest individuals involved in waterway design, marine education, and the marine environment.

Applying Advanced Information Systems to Ports and Waterways Management Division on Engineering and Physical Sciences,Commission on Engineering and Technical Systems,Marine Board,1999-04-17 The future safety of maritime transportation in the United States-a major factor in the nation's international trade and economic well-being-will depend heavily on the quality of port and waterways information systems. Many U.S. ports and waterways lack adequate information services, although certain elements of advanced systems are now available in some locations. Barriers to improvements in information systems include the division of responsibilities for waterways management among multiple agencies at all levels of government, a lack of coordination among the federal agencies responsible for waterways management, inadequate budgets for some critical maritime programs, the high costs of some specialized technologies, stakeholder opposition to user fees, limited access to certain key data, the incompatibility of many independently developed systems, and the absence of standards for some attractive technologies. In this report, the second phase of a three-year study by the Committee on Maritime Advanced Information Systems of the National Research Council, a strategy is presented for overcoming the major barriers and deficiencies and providing a minimum level of maritime safety information nationwide. In this phase of the study, the committee concentrated on maritime information systems that promote safety, which is the area of greatest need. The committee did not examine in detail the relationship between navigation safety and maritime transportation efficiency or evaluate information systems that promote efficiency; the committee believes, however, that these issues deserve further attention.

Big Data on Vessel Traffic: Nowcasting Trade Flows in Real Time Mr.Serkan Arslanalp,Mr.Marco Marini,Ms.Patrizia Tumbarello,2019-12-13 Vessel traffic data based on the Automatic Identification System (AIS) is a big data source for nowcasting trade activity in real time. Using Malta as a benchmark, we develop indicators of trade and maritime activity based on AIS-based port calls. We test the quality of these indicators by comparing them with official statistics on trade and maritime statistics. If the challenges associated with port call data are overcome through appropriate filtering techniques, we show that these emerging “big data” on vessel traffic could allow statistical agencies to complement existing data sources on trade and introduce new statistics that are more timely (real time), offering an innovative way to measure trade activity. That, in turn, could facilitate faster detection of turning points in economic activity. The approach could be extended to create a real-time worldwide indicator of global trade activity.
