From No to Go Lorenzo Brown, 2018-07-30 What is your definition of success? What do YOU think makes one truly successful? These questions are not easy ones to answer because our environment is influential in shaping our ideas and perceptions of success. Without even realizing it, we are accustomed to aspire to things that our hearts do not desire; the end result is that we are never satisfied. If we do not achieve, we experience feelings of defeat; if we do succeed, we still remain unfulfilled. HAVE YOU EVER ASKED YOURSELF ANY OF THE FOLLOWING QUESTIONS? What do successful people look like? How do they feel the majority of the time? How should they feel the majority of the time? Society conditions people to believe that success is equivalent to money; however, there is no dollar amount associated with success. The people who are truly living passionate, healthy and purpose-filled lives have a secret to their success that's more valuable than money. This book is for those who want to define what success authentically means for them. I believe that we all have these little desires that connect us to our true purpose.

GPS versus Galileo: Balancing for Position in Space Scott W. Beidleman,2012-08-12 This study investigates Europe's motives to develop the independent satellite navigation system known as Galileo despite the existence of America's successful global positioning system (GPS). The author contends that Europe's pursuit of Galileo is driven by a combination of reasons, including performance, independence, and economic incentive. With Galileo, Europe hopes to achieve political, security, and technological independence from the United States. Additionally, Europe envisions overcoming the US monopoly on GNSS by seizing a sizable share of the expanding GNSS market and setting a new world standard for satellite navigation. Finally, the author explores Galileo's impact on the United States and reviews US policy towards Galileo. The study concludes with recommendations to strengthen the competitiveness of GPS.
