Critical Connection Kathi A. Brown, 1992-08-01 CRITICAL CONNECTION: THE MOTOROLA SERVICE STATION STORY chronicles the three-generation relationship between Motorola & the Motorola Service Stations. CRITICAL CONNECTION explores the role of risk taking in Motorola's prosperity, from Paul Galvin's shoestring radio venture in the 1920s, to the mutual gamble between the MSS & Motorola in the 1950s, to today's breathtaking Iridium (tm) initiative. The book's blunt look at the trials & errors on the way to the Fortune 500 yields surprises & positive lessons about taking chances. There are a lot of people around here who think that you can't take risks, says Motorola CEO George Fisher, & it's critical for them to understand that we take risks every day. I take them, some of them are very big ones. It's important to know that you can make mistakes, & go on. It's a bigger problem to do nothing than make mistakes. Today's professional manager is playing in a totally different ball park, at a completely different state of the company's evolution. It is important to understand the way business shaped up & the tight linkage between customers & service over the entire history of the company. To order: Motorola University Press, 1295 E. The Founder's Touch Harry Mark Petrakis, 1991 Paul Vincent Galvin was Chairman of the Board of Motorola, Inc. & one of the most dynamic leaders on the American business scene. THE FOUNDER'S TOUCH is the exciting account of a vast business built from scratch, the story of a man whose life reflected the changing world of the twentieth century. Like Edison, Ford, & Firestone, among others, Galvin could not be contained by the limited horizons of his small midwestern hometown. In 1923, he moved to Chicago to manufacture storage batteries with his brother Joe. A new American society was forming; industry had grown & was growing still. On the wave of radio's popularity, Galvin's small manufacturing company enjoyed a mild success. His limitless energy demanded new outlets, & with his brother & talented associates he developed a radio that could be used in the new motorcars appearing on the highway. Galvin's achievements & the expansion that followed World War II tell the story of Motorola. Galvin's faith in himself & his product earned him the respect of his customers & the loyalty of his employees. His life story is a reflection of America in the twentieth century, a life bound to that giant corporation which still retains the Galvin touch.

Analysis of Motorola's Personal Communications Segment Marco März, 2004-07-26 Seminar paper from the year 2004 in the subject Business economics - Business Management, Corporate Governance, grade: 1,7 (A-), University of Bradford (School of Management), course: Applied Strategic Management, language: English, abstract: In 1928 Paul Galvin founded the company as the “Galvin Manufacturing Corporation” in Chicago, Illinois. The first product launch, called a “battery eliminator” allowed radio consumers to operate directly from household current instead of the batteries supplied with earlier models. But the company's name was soon displaced through its main product, “Motorola” radios, figurehead that conjures up the historical symbiosis of a mobile radio and a car (Agar, 2003). Under the leadership of Paul Galvin, Motorola became leader in military, space and commercial communications, grew as a manufacturer of consumer electronics and built its first semiconductor facility. The company founder died in 1959. As his successor Robert W. Galvin, P. Galvin's son, was introduced. Within his leadership Motorola expanded into the international markets, and their object of view was shifted away from consumer electronics. As a fact of this challenge, the colour-TV receiver business was sold in the mid 70's, so that they could concentrate their abilities on high-technology markets in commercial, industrial and government fields. With the 80's ending, Motorola had become the doyen supplier of cellular phones. (www.motorola.com) You could say, that Motorola, Inc. is a global provider of wireless, broadband, automotive communications technologies and embedded electronic products. Further on the company provides software-enhanced wireless telephone and messaging, two-way radio products and systems, as well as networking and Internet-access products, for consumers, network operators and commercial, government and industrial customers. Motorola also provides end-to-end systems for the delivery of interactive digital video, voice and high-speed data solutions for broadband operators, and embedded semiconductor solutions for customers in wireless communications, networking and transportation markets. In addition, the company offers integrated electronic systems for the automotive, telematics, industrial, telecommunications, computing and portable energy systems markets. The last reported count of employees was 88.000. (www.yahoo.com) In most parts of my strategic analysis, I will focus on the Personal Communications Segment (PCS) of Motorola, the business group of Motorola's cellular phones. Following Nokia, Motorola is the 2nd largest mobile phone producer worldwide.
