Joint Special Operations

Implementing Category Management Across United States Special Operations Command (SOCOM)

Charlie Mark D Dacanay, Moises Guzman, Naval

Postgraduate School, 2021-03-02 The purpose of this research is to implement category management (CM) in the United States Special Operations Command (SOCOM) enterprise. It also examines, classifies, and analyzes expenditures and spending trends for SOCOM. A spend analysis was conducted to identify spending trends and provide opportunity analysis to leverage buying power. Our methodology includes analyzing spend reports for SOCOM as a whole and conducting a gap analysis between the current CM state and the two future states: initial desired state and future ideal state. These analyses provide visibility and insight into SOCOM's expenditures and facilitate recommendations to close the gap and effectively implement CM. Our recommendations include spend-related actionable items for SOCOM to consider when implementing CM, immediate actionable items for SOCOM to stand its initial small-scale CM function to operate at initial operating capability (IOC), and future actionable items for SOCOM to implement CM at full operating capability (FOC).

Complexity, Organizational Blindness, and the SOCOM Design Way David C. Ellis, Charles N. Black, 2018

Complexity, Organizational Blindness, and the SOCOM Design Way (SDW) takes on the monumental task of explaining why the complex world is so difficult to comprehend and provides a way for navigating through it. The authors accomplish this utilizing U.S. Special Operations Command design techniques. This monograph is not just for the Special Operator or the Operational Planner. It is useful for anyone who is seeking out a better way to address problems that seem to have no solution. Dr. David Ellis and

Mr. Charles Black provide the tools necessary to define the problem and develop an approach. The SDW needs to be seriously considered and put into practice if the community desires to make progress in complex and wicked problems.-Publisher's description.

MARSOC Fred Pushies, 2011-11-15 An illustrated profile of the Marine Corps component of USSOCOM, its origins & history, training & missions, and special equipment & weapons. The United States Marine Corps has a rich tradition of special operations, from World War II's famed Marine Raiders and Para Marines to Korea and Vietnam's legendary Marine Force Recon companies. Indeed, when Navy underwater demolition teams, the direct predecessors to the SEALs, performed the preinvasion reconnaissance of Iwo Jima, recon Marines were part of the mission. But when US Special Operations Command (USSOCOM) was created in 1987 in the wake of the abortive Desert One hostage rescue mission, the Marines did not join in. Spec ops on land, sea, and air were covered by the Army, Navy, and Air Force; the Corps felt it needed to keep its top warriors with its conventional forces. In the post-9/11 world, however, the need for special operations forces dramatically increased. With the creation of the Marine Special Operations Command (MARSOC) in 2006, Marines officially become part of USSCOM. Initially drawn from the ranks of Force Recon companies, these highly skilled and combat-proven Leathernecks joined their spec ops brethren in taking the war to al-Qaeda and the Taliban in America's global war on terrorism. MARSOC's mission is to win wars before they begin, taking combat beyond the frontlines. When America needs to respond to aggression in distant lands, the call comes to send in the Marines. With the creation of MARSOC, chances are special operations Marines are already there.

Authorities and Options for Funding United States Special Operations Command Operations Elvira N. Loreda, John E. Peters, Karlyn D. Stanley, Matthew E. Boyer, William Welser (IV), Thomas S. Szayna, U.S. Special Operations Command, National Defense Research Institute (U.S.), 2014

Weapons of the US Special Operations Command Chris McNab, 2019-07-25 The units and formations of the US Special Operations Command (SOCOM) have privileged access to the finest weaponry in the world's arsenal.

Whether Army, Navy, Air Force, or Marines, the SOCOM troops select weapons that match their mission requirements, but which also sit at the cutting edge of combat technology. This means that, while SOCOM troops frequently use standard-issue weaponry, they also adopt many specialist pieces of kit that are not so accessible to the broader armed services, including sniper rifles, battle rifles, and machine guns, as well as high-tech tactical accessories used to transform standard weaponry into something exceptional. Assessing the technology and capabilities of these combat weapons, as well as how they have been used in modern combat, this fully illustrated study lifts the veil on some of the most distinctive hand-held weapon systems of US special operations forces since 1987.

Defense Acquisitions; An Analysis of the Special Operations Command's Management of Weapon System Programs , Defense Acquisitions United States Government Accountability Office, 2017-09-13 Special Operations Command's (SOCOM) duties have greatly increased since the attacks of September 11, 2001. Today, Special Operations Forces are at work in Afghanistan and Iraq, and SOCOM has been assigned to lead U.S. efforts in the Global War on Terrorism. SOCOM's acquisitions budget has also greatly increased in this period-more than doubling from $788 million in 2001 to approximately $1.91 billion in 2006. In light of SOCOM's expanded duties, Congress requested that GAO review SOCOM's management of its acquisition programs. GAO's evaluation includes an assessment of: the types of acquisition programs SOCOM has undertaken since 2001 and whether the programs are consistent with its mission; the extent to which SOCOM's programs have progressed as planned; and the challenges SOCOM faces in managing its acquisition programs.

Organizing SOCOM for Cross-Functional and Geographic Area Operations in the Global War on Terrorism , 2005 While Special Operations Command (SOCOM) has started to transform its organization, the nature of the terrorist threat requires something more. To defeat and deny/diminish the terrorist threat across geographic and functional areas of responsibility (AOR), SOCOM needs two entirely different organizations. One organization would operate in the very same seams as the terrorists, while the second organization would take on the mission of smoothing and preventing those seams. The first organization would plan, direct, and execute direct-action type operations designed to defeat the terrorist threat, while the second organization would plan, direct, and execute long-term, nonkinetic operations such as information operations (IO), psychological operations (PSYOPS), unconventional warfare (UW), and foreign internal defense (FID) to deny/diminish the threat. The first organization would be a small, cellular interagency organization composed of personnel on loan for an extended period from agencies such as the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA), Defense Intelligence Agency (DIA), and Department of Justice (DOJ). The second organization would be a much larger entity that would work across geographic boundaries to integrate IO, PSYOPS, UW, and FID into the geographic combatant commanders' (GCC) theater security cooperation plans to shape and prevent future battlefields.

SOCOM M. Zachary Sherman, 2006-03 When a submarine is mysteriously downed in the Persian Gulf, CIA tactician Douglas Griffin is reactivated into his former SEAL team to investigate. Simultaneously, a string of mystifying attacks pits the U.S. Navy against the underwater Kingdom of Atlantis in a full-blown war against humanity's extinction. With the threat of global devastation imminent, twisting realities lead the SEALs from Atlantis' 5000 fathoms to the even deeper political waters of our government in this Spy-Fi action thriller!
