17A Keong Saik Road Charmaine Leung,2023-04-25 Mummy, why do you always have to leave for 17A... 17A Keong Saik Road recounts Charmaine Leung's growing-up years on Keong Saik Road in the 1970s when it was a prominent red-light precinct in Chinatown in Singapore. An interweaving of past and present narratives, 17A Keong Saik Road tells of her mother's journey as a young child put up for sale to becoming the madame of a brothel in Keong Saik. Unfolding her story as the daughter of a brothel operator and witnessing these changes to her family, Charmaine traces the transformation of the Keong Saik area from the 1930s to the present, and through writing, finds reconciliation. A beautiful dedication to the past, to memory, and to the people who have gone before us, 17A Keong Saik Road tells the rich stories of the Ma Je, the Pei Pa Zai, and the Dai Gu Liong—marginalised, forgotten women of the past, who despite their difficulties, persevered in working towards the hope of a better future.

The Review was organized by the Center for NDE at Iowa State University, in cooperation with the Ames Laboratory of the USDOE, the American Society of Nondestructive Testing, the National Institute of Standards and Technology, the Federal Aviation Administration, and the National Science Foundation Industry/University Cooperative Research Centers. This year's Review of Progress in QNDE was attended by approximately 370 participants from the US and many foreign countries who presented a total of approximately 350 papers. As usual, the meeting was divided into 36 sessions with four sessions running concurrently. The Review covered all phases of NDE research and development from fundamental investigations to engineering applications and inspection systems, and methods of inspection science from acoustics to x-rays. The Review continues to experience some fluctuations in size, mostly under pressure from a decrease in funding for NDE research at the US Federal level, but increased participation from foreign laboratories has more than made up the difference. The Review is ideally sized to permit a full-scale overview of the latest developments in a collegial atmosphere that most participants favor. The opening plenary session this year concentrated on advances in imaging technologies and methodologies that have been made in recent years. Dr. K.

The Role of IL-17a in Modulating B Cell Response During Influenza Virus Infection Xiaohui Wang,□□□,2017-01-27 This dissertation, The Role of IL-17A in Modulating B Cell Response During Influenza Virus Infection by Xiaohui, Wang, □□□, was obtained from The University of Hong Kong (Pokfulam, Hong Kong) and is being sold pursuant to Creative Commons: Attribution 3.0 Hong Kong License. Abstract: Interleukin-17A (IL-17A)is an important pro-inflammatory cytokine that plays a critical role in host defenses against diverse pathogens. Studies have shown that IL-17Aplays protective role against sub-lethal H1 and H3 subtypes influenza infections, but it is unclear about the role of IL-17A in the highly pathogenic H5N1 and lethal H1N1 influenza virus infection. B cell is an important effector cell type in anti-influenza immunity. Although roles of B cell in influenza infection have been extensively investigated, it is unclear whether and how IL-17AregulatesB cell response during influenza infection. I examined the role of IL-17A against influenza infection by challengingIL-17A knockout (KO) and wild-type (WT) mice with highly pathogenic H5N1 and lethal H1N1 influenza viruses. Following challenge, IL-17AKO mice exhibited significantly lower survival rate, profoundly reduced body weight, more severe tissue damage and higher viral burden in the lung tissues. These evidences suggest that IL-17Aplays a protective role in lethal influenza infection. To study whether IL-17Amodulates B cell response against influenza, I found that both B-1a and B-2 cells were detected in the lung tissue and pulmonary draining lymph node, Mediastinal lymph node (MedLN), as early as 2days post-infection. Meanwhile, B-1a cells predominantly contributed to the early virus-specific IgM in the respiratory tract. However, virus-specific IgM markedly reduced in IL-17A KO mice when compared with WT controls. Adoptive transfer of B-1a cells or B-1a cell-derived antibodies conferred protection in IL-17A KO mice. These results demonstrate that IL-17A plays a critical role in modulating early antibody production of B-1a cells against lethal influenza infection. To further elucidate how IL-17A regulates B-1a cell response, I observed that B-1a cells migrated into MedLN and lung tissues during infection and underwent plasmacytic differentiation with increased antibody production in airways. IL-17A deficiency impaired these processes of B-1a cells, while intra-nasally instillation of IL-17A restored B-1a cell response by promoting both B-1a cell migration and plasmacytic differentiation. By inducing blimp-1 expression in B-1a cells in an NF-κB dependent pathway, IL-17A directly promoted plasmacytic differentiation of B-1a cells both in vivo and in vitro. Furthermore, chromatin immuno-precipitation analysis confirmed that NF-κB directly bound to the promoter of blimp-1 gene and promoted blimp-1 expression in B-1a cells following IL-17A stimulation. To determine the functional significance of IL-17A signaling in modulating B cell response against influenza infection, I first uncovered markedly reduced B cell response, predominantly B-1a cell response in IL-17A KO mice, showing reduced local migration and impaired plasmacytic differentiation in the early stage of infection. Next, intra-nasal administration of IL-17A into IL-17A KO mice significantly restored this B-1a cell response. Moreover, I detected expression of IL-17A receptor in B-1a cells. IL-17A treatment could promote antibody production from B-1a cells by inducing blimp-1 expression in an NF-κB dependent pathway. Taken together, these findings identify a novel role of IL-17A in actingas an immune modulator of B cell response against influenza infection, which will contribute to a fuller understanding of B cell biology and anti-vi

Borrelia-induced Arthritis in Mice Deficient in Interleukin-17a Joseph Kuo,2017 Lyme arthritis is one of the most frequent late manifestations of Lyme borreliosis in the United States. Interleukin-17A (IL-17A) has been associated with the development of Borrelia-induced arthritis in human patients and experimental mice. Here, I investigated whether Borrelia-induced arthritis develops under IL-17A-deficiency. I hypothesized that Borrelia-induced arthritis will not develop under IL-17A-deficiency. IL-17A-deficient and wild-type mice primed with heat-inactivated Borrelia and infected with viable heterologous borrelial strain were examined. Interestingly, arthritis developed in IL-17A-deficient mice, and may be due to elevated levels of pro-inflammatory gamma-interferon (IFN-[small gamma]) detected in sera and popliteal lymph node cells. However, neutralization of IFN-[small gamma] with antibodies did not suppress Borrelia-induced arthritis in IL-17A-deficient and wild-type mice, but resulted in a shift in production of tumor necrosis factor alpha (TNF-[small alpha]) and IL-6, two other pro-inflammatory cytokines. Moreover, treatment with anti-TNF-[small alpha] or anti-IL-6 antibody did not inhibit the development of arthritis in IL-17A-deficient mice. Furthermore, combination treatments with two of the three anti-cytokine antibodies did not influence the induction of arthritis in Borrelia-primed and -infected wild-type and IL-17A-deficient mice. However, the development of Borrelia-induced arthritis was inhibited after treating IL-17A-deficient mice with anti-IFN-[small gamma], anti-TNF-[small alpha], and anti-IL-6 antibodies. Overall, the results suggest that multiple cytokines interact in disease progression, shift in cytokine production occurs in animal models with deficiencies, and treatment with multiple cytokine antibodies can inhibit the development of Borrelia-induced arthritis.
