Proposed Steps to Address Excessive Delays in the Completion of Article IV Consultations International Monetary Fund. Legal Dept., International Monetary Fund. Strategy, Policy, & Review Department, 2012-03-02 Bilateral surveillance is mandatory for both the Fund and its members, and all members have an obligation to consult with the Fund for this purpose.³ Periodic consultations with members on their policies and access to necessary information are essential for effective bilateral surveillance. Furthermore, to enable the Fund to effectively conduct multilateral surveillance, bilateral surveillance needs to cover all economies at a reasonable frequency.

Preliminary Considerations of Options to Address Excessive Delays in the Completion of Article IV Consultations International Monetary Fund, 2011-04-28 This paper aims to engage Directors on how best to promote timely completion of Article IV consultations. Surveillance is mandatory for both the Fund and its members, and members have an obligation to consult with the Fund for this purpose. In this context, it is useful to consider if further steps are warranted to address cases in which members do not consult with the Fund on a timely basis. This paper does not propose Board decisions at this stage. Instead it lays out ideas to elicit Directors' views. Based on this informal discussion, staff could return later to the Board, if needed for a formal discussion and possible decisions.
