Take Back the Tray Joshna Maharaj, 2020-05-05 A beloved chef takes on institutional food and sparks a revolution. Good food generally doesn't arrive on a tray: hospital food is famously ridiculed, chronic student hunger is deemed a rite of passage, and prison meals are considered part of the punishment. But Chef Joshna Maharaj knows that institutional kitchens have the ability to produce good, nourishing food, because she's been making it happen over the past 14 years. She's served meals to people who'd otherwise go hungry, baked fresh scones for maternity ward mothers, and dished out wholesome, scratch-made soups to stressed-out undergrads. She's determined to bring health, humanity, and hospitality back to institutional food while also building sustainability, supporting the local economy, and reinvigorating the work of frontline staff. Take Back the Tray is part manifesto, part memoir from the trenches, and a blueprint for reclaiming control from corporations and brutal bottom lines. Maharaj reconnects food with health, wellness, education, and rehabilitation in a way that serves people, not just budgets, and proves change is possible with honest, sustained commitment on all levels, from government right down to the person sorting the trash. The need is clear, the time is now, and this revolution is delicious.

Kid Food Bettina Elias Siegel, 2019 It has never been so difficult to raise a healthy eater in America. Along with the picky eating and public tantrums that have forever tested the limits of parental patience, today's parents also fend off sophisticated assaults from outside their kitchens: unhealthy food-marketing campaigns aimed at kids; misleading product labels aimed at parents; and a school-food program so starved for cash that it sells name-brand junk food to grade school students. In Kid Food, nationally recognized food writer Bettina Elias Siegel (New York Times, The Lunch Tray) explores the cultural delusions and industry deceptions that have made it all but impossible to raise a healthy eater in America. Combining first-person reporting with the hard-won understanding of a food advocate and parent, it presents a startling portrayal of the current food landscape for children - and the role of parents in navigating it. Siegel also lifts the curtain on shadowy food industry front-groups, including clever marketing techniques that intentionally confuse parents about a product's nutritional value. (Did you know that made with real fruit may mean a product is less healthy?) What emerges is the industry's divide-and-conquer strategy, one that stokes kids' desire for junk food while breaking down parents' ability to act as responsible gatekeepers. For anyone who frets over what their child is eating, Kid Food offers both essential reading and a deeper understanding of the factors at play in their child's food environment. Written in the same engaging and relatable voice that has made The Lunch Tray a trusted resource for parents for almost a decade, Kid Food offers a well of compassion - and expertise - for those fighting the good fight at home.

Characterization of a Polymeric Food Tray Proposed for Military Use, 1998 The U.S. military utilizes a wide variety of food packaging systems to deliver rations to soldiers throughout the world. Food products and packaging systems must be capable of withstanding large variations in humidity, temperature and extended storage, as well as distribution related shock and vibration. Currently, polymeric trays are being evaluated to ensure their military suitability under each of these rigorous conditions. In addition, it was necessary to determine the thermal stability, assess the thickness and the uniformity of various tray layers. The potential also exists that polymeric additives are capable of migrating from polymeric trays, thus becoming food additives. Chemical migration evaluations were conducted by way of soxhlet extractions of the polymeric tray with both 5 percent acetic acid and chloroform. Gas chromatography-mass spectrometry evaluation of chloroform extracts indicated the presence of aliphatic hydrocarbon oligomers from the polypropylene tray. Several antioxidants were also observed in the chloroform extracts. Analysis by differential scanning calorimetry (DSC) showed that the trays were stable at minimum and maximum temperatures. The DSC data showed that the thermal processing of the polymeric tray had a minimal effect on crystallinity. Scanning electron microscopy (SEM) revealed the quantitative thickness of the various layers.
