Monitoring the News: The Brilliant Launch and Sudden Collapse of the Monitor Channel Susan Bridge,2015-05-20 In her colorful insider's account, Susan Bridge analyzes the bitter struggle that ensued when a sophisticated entrepreneurial leadership tried to diversify and reposition The Christian Science Monitor beyond the failing newspaper into radio, the Internet, multimedia publishing, and -- the highest-ticket item of all -- The Monitor Channel, a CNN-style, 24-hour news and public affairs channel. Using the Monitor's story as a focus, Susan Bridge raises fundamental questions about how and whether the public's interest can be served in an age of spiraling costs, competition between print and electronic media, changing public tastes, and undeclared media wars.

The Construction of the U.S.S Monitor Stephen

Thompson, 2019-07-08 In the centuries preceding the American Civil War, the large wooden sailing ship was the mainstay of the world's navies. Then, in the spring of 1861, Stephen Mallory, secretary of the Navy of the Confederate States of America, issued a challenge to the United States Navy: the South was going to fight the numerically superior wooden Navy of the US in ironclad ships. The Union responded to the challenge with its own ironclad, the Monitor, but the South had the advantage of an earlier start. The Merrimac was designed and built to fight wooden ships; the Monitor was created to fight the Merrimac. The US Navy's urgent need for an ironclad led a naval review board to accept the proposed design of the Monitor after initially having rejected it. Manuscripts reveal how the board examined and turned down several proposals; they also describe how the Monitor's designer defended her against skeptics and how the construction of the vessel was organized and undertaken. The book describes the formation of a cartel of northeastern iron and shipbuilding industries that sought to monopolize the construction of blue-water ironclads. This investigation of the origin of the Monitor departs from earlier studies by focusing on the construction companies rather than on Ericsson and his most visible partners. The construction of the Monitor has never been thoroughly investigated. Most of the literature on the Monitor focuses either on Ericsson and his associates or on the dramatic meeting of the Monitor and the Merrimac; it generally ignores the actual building of the vessel. The few attempts to describe her construction contain numerous errors particularly with respect to the operation of her innovative turret.

Watson, Samuel Dana Greene, John Lorimer Worden, H. Ashton Ramsay, 2019-12-05 Step into the history books with 'The Monitor and the Merrimac' by Samuel Dana Greene, H. Ashton Ramsay, Eugene Winslow Watson, and John Lorimer Worden. This first-hand account of the Battle of the Ironclads in Hampton Roads, Virginia, takes readers aboard the Union ship the Monitor and Confederate ship the Merrimack. This short but powerful book captures the essence of the American Civil War and naval history, including the use of torpedoes, revolving gun turrets, and rifled gun barrels.

The Monitor and the Merrimac Fletcher Pratt, 1951 Authentic naval history of the Civil War is brought out in this account of an inventor, of proud ships and the men who made up the crews-- H.W. Wilson.

The Christian Monitors Brent S. Sirota, 2014-01-07 This original and persuasive book examines the moral and religious revival led by the Church of England before and after the Glorious Revolution, and shows how that revival laid the groundwork for a burgeoning civil society in Britain. After outlining the Church of England's key role in the increase of voluntary, charitable, and religious societies, Brent Sirota examines how these groups drove the modernization of Britain through such activities as settling immigrants throughout the empire, founding charity schools, distributing devotional literature, and evangelizing and educating merchants, seamen, and slaves throughout the British empire—all leading to what has been termed the “age of benevolence.”
