Accounting Information Systems Leslie Turner, Andrea B. Weickgenannt, Mary Kay Copeland, 2020-01-02 Accounting Information Systems provides a comprehensive knowledgebase of the systems that generate, evaluate, summarize, and report accounting information. Balancing technical concepts and student comprehension, this textbook introduces only the most-necessary technology in a clear and accessible style. The text focuses on business processes and accounting and IT controls, and includes discussion of relevant aspects of ethics and corporate governance. Relatable real-world examples and abundant end-of-chapter resources reinforce Accounting Information Systems (AIS) concepts and their use in day-to-day operation. Now in its fourth edition, this popular textbook explains IT controls using the AICPA Trust Services Principles framework—a comprehensive yet easy-to-understand framework of IT controls—and allows for incorporating hands-on learning to complement theoretical concepts. A full set of pedagogical features enables students to easily comprehend the material, understand data flow diagrams and document flowcharts, discuss case studies and examples, and successfully answer end-of-chapter questions. The book's focus on ease of use, and its straightforward presentation of business processes and related controls, make it an ideal primary text for business or accounting students in AIS courses.

The P.O.S. Decision Cameron Thomas, Lu Zhang, JaeMin Cha, Jeffrey Beck, 2018 This case study examines the issue of Point of Sale (POS) system adoption and implementation in the context of two independent full service restaurants in Northeast Ohio. The main focus is on the restaurant company Ray's Place, which has locations in Fairlawn and Kent, Ohio. Ray's Place Fairlawn (opened in 2014) adopted a POS system prior to opening. However, some of the beneficial POS data have not been regularly tracked. Ray's Place Kent (Est. 1937) has historically, and still currently utilizes a manual guest check system. The owner and senior management team are now facing the difficult decision of whether Ray's Place Kent should adopt a similar POS system as the one installed at Ray's Place Fairlawn or continue with manual operation.

Point of sale credits from a consumer's perspective Vera Metzen, 2011-03-08 Bachelor Thesis from the year 2009 in the subject Business economics – Miscellaneous, grade: 1,4, Heidelberg International Business Academy, language: English, abstract: Being a traditional emergency credit for the poorer members of society for a long time, most people thought that POS credits were 'unsolid' and thus did not use it. Nowadays, this situation has changed for a variety of reasons and several authors have undertaken research on the subject in general or from a retailer's perspective. This piece of work focuses on the consumer's perspective of POS credits and shows that several factors, such as age, discretionary income and social position determine a person's perception and usage pattern of the POS credit. In order to identify these relationships the author has undertaken primary and secondary research. The knowledge of authors who have previously written on the subject has been used to design a questionnaire that allows for a considerable analysis of the above mentioned relationships. For primary research 100 anonymous people have been questioned in a shopping centre in Heidelberg, Germany using an interview administered quantitative questionnaire. Most of the results are in line with the findings of other authors. However, primary research shows that society as a whole still believes that a POS credit is an emergency credit and that most people's perception of the credit is not as favourable as it is often assumed. Moreover, specific reasons for a positive or negative perception are strongly related to a person's age rather than to social position. Most of users of this financing tool seem to use it for acquiring non-necessary prestigious items. The estimated price of the item rises with the person's age and income. Main motives for using the credit instead of a bank loan could not be identified due to the sample's size. However, primary research implies that using POS credits might often be subject to previous friends' experience.
