Broad-Area Laser Bars for 1 kW-Emission Matthias M. Karow ,2022-06-27

Industrial laser systems for material processing applications rely on the availability of highly efficient, high-brightness diode lasers. GaAs-based broad-area laser bars play a vital role in such applications as pump sources for high-beam-quality solid-state lasers and, increasingly, as direct processing tools. This work studies 940 nm-laser bars emitting 1 kW optical power at room temperature, identifying those physical mechanisms that are currently limiting electrical-to-optical conversion efficiency as well as lateral beam quality. In the process, several diagnostic studies on bars with varied lateral-longitudinal design were carried out. The effects of technological measures for performance optimization were analyzed, yielding a new benchmark in efficiency and lateral divergence. The studies into altered resonator lengths of 4 and 6 mm as well as fill factors between 69 and 87 % successfully reduce both the voltage dropping across the device and power saturation at high currents, enabling 66 % efficiency at the operation point. Concrete measures how to reach efficiencies ≥ 70 % are presented thereafter, showing that doubling the efficiency value of the first 1 kW-demonstration in 2007 – amounting to 35 % – is in near reach. Investigation of the beam quality bases on a herein proposed and realized concept, in which the far field is resolved for each individual bar emitter. In this way, it is possible to determine how far-field profiles vary along the bar width and how much these variations affect the overall bar far-field. Further, such effects specific to bar structures can be separated into non-thermal and thermal influences. The effect of mechanical chip deformation (bar smile) as well as neighboring-emitter interaction has been investigated for the first time in active kW-class devices, yielding a lateral divergence as low as 8.8° at the operation point.

Argon Operation of the 120-kw Sandia Arc Jet Facility W. J. Whitfield, G. E. Reis, 1963 Since the arc jet promises to be a test facility capable of matching the specific energies of actual flight over sustained periods, Sandia Corporation has been operating a pilot 120-kw plasma jet facility to evaluate its operating parameters and potential usefulness through a combination of theoretical and experimental efforts. The predictions of a somewhat simplified theoretical analysis are shown to agree reasonably well with the observed experimental data. The thermal characteristics of the plasma jet have not yet been checked. Incidentally, the study casts some doubt on the wisdom of using the Langmuir probes in this kind of facility.

A Preliminary Study of a 1000 KW(e) Mobile Nuclear Power System ,1960

Design, Construction, and Operation of a 150 KW Solar-powered Irrigation Facility D. Duffy,M. Matteo,D. Rafinejad,1980 Acurex Corporation was contracted to design, construct and startup a solar powered experimental facility to provide 150 kW of electric power for the operation of deep-well irrigation pumps. Acurex also supplied its Model 3001 Solar Collector. This facility is located on the Dalton Cole Farm near Coolidge, Arizona. The facility is presently the largest operating solar thermal powerplant in the world. Experience gained on this plant will pave the way for many future power generation facilities. The present International Energy Agency (IEA) project in Spain is utilizing technology learned on the 150 kW project. The project was operated and completed by September 30, 1979 and was turned over to the DOE technical advisor, Sandia Laboratories, and the University of Arizona on October 1, 1979. The dedication of the project occurred on November 9, 1979. The solar collectors were tracking on full automatic, and the power conversion system started up and operated on automatic control for full demonstration to the public and many honored guests.
