The Note-books of Samuel Butler ... Samuel Butler, 1917

Judith Butler, Race and Education Charlotte

Chadderton, 2018-05-22 This book provides an analysis of race and education through the lens of the work of Judith Butler. Although Butler tends to be best known in the field of education for her work on gender and sexuality, her work more broadly encompasses the functioning of power and hegemonic norms and the formation of subjects, and thus can also be applied to analyse issues of race.

Applying a Butlerian framework to race allows us to question its ontological status, while considering it a hegemonic norm and a performative notion which has a significant impact on real lives. The author considers the implications of Butler's thinking for debates; addressing diverse contemporary educational issues in which race continues to be (re)produced, such as the formation of learner identities, the production of the good citizen, raising student aspirations, counter terrorism and surveillance in education, and qualitative research in education. This book will be of interest to students and scholars of education and race, the sociology of education and equality of opportunity.

Bodies, Power and Resistance in the Middle East Caitlin Ryan, 2015-08-14 The book examines how exercises of power and processes of security exercised in the Occupied Palestinian Territories have formed Palestinian women as subjects. To understand how women experience occupation, this book examines the various ways in which the occupation is directed at making Palestinian women into subjects of power. The work argues that the exercises of power are focused on controlling and disciplining women's bodies. The objectives are to expose how the exclusions of women's daily-lived experiences of conflict in the occupied Palestinian territories obscures how power operates, to demonstrate how the elements of Israeli security practices make women insecure, and to highlight how resistance to the occupation can be found embedded within daily life in the occupied territories. Ultimately, all of these themes can be related more broadly to how women might experience conflict and resist subjectification by exposing different ways that subjectifications result in insecurities and resistance to those insecurities. While the book is specific to women in the Occupied Palestinian Territories, the exercises of power and enactments of resistance it exposes demonstrate how important it is to take seriously the feminist argument that 'the personal is international, and the international is personal.' This book will be of much interest to students of gender politics, critical security studies, Middle Eastern politics, sociology and IR in general.

In it, Samuel's urges the destruction of all machines as he raises the pioneering idea that they will one day replace humans as the dominant species. This and the later article 'Lucubratio Ebria' (1865), became part of his widely acclaimed first novel 'Erewhon'. Butler wrote several other novels, including a sequel, 'Erewhon Revisited' and the highly acclaimed 'The Way of all Flesh', widely regarded as one of the greatest novels of the 20th century. Samuel Butler (1835-1902) was a revolutionary English novelist and critic. He is best known for the utopian novel 'Erewhon' (1872) and the posthumous, semi-autobiographical novel 'The Way of All Flesh' (1903). Both of which have remained in print ever since. 'Erewhon' is renowned as one of the first books to explore the idea of machine evolution. The English writer Aldous Huxley acknowledged the book's influence on his novel 'Brave New World', while George Bernard Shaw deemed Butler 'the greatest English writer of the latter half of the nineteenth century.'
