Numerical Aircraft Design Using 3-D Transonic Analysis with Optimization Andrew J. Srokowski,M. E. Lores,R. A. Weed,P. R. Simth,1981 The purpose was to develop and validate a new transonic wing design procedure using the numerical optimization technique. The new procedure was used to design both a transport and a fighter configuration. Because the missions and design requirements of a fighter and transport are so different, the design procedure was developed along parallel lines. Lockheed-Georgia Co. developed the transport design procedure, and Grumman Aerospace Corp. developed the fighter design procedure. This is Part 1 of a two-part volume: Part 1 details the transport development, and Part 2 describes the fighter development. The results of a transport design case study performed to evaluate the transonic aircraft design procedure developed as part of the Advanced Transonic Technology (ATT) program are presented. A derivative of the C141B aircraft was selected as the design configuration. The design procedure was applied to the baseline configuration and the performance of resulting configuration was then compared to the C141 aircraft. Extensive wind tunnel testing of the design configuration was performed to validate the design procedure. The results of the wind tunnel tests are correlated with computational results generated in the design process. In addition, the evolution of the design procedure and its application in the transport design case study is discussed.

Basic Research and Technologies for Two-Stage-to-Orbit Vehicles Dieter Jacob,Gottfried Sachs,Siegfried Wagner,2006-03-06 Focusing on basic aspects of future reusable space transportation systems and covering overall design, aerodynamics, thermodynamics, flight dynamics, propulsion, materials, and structures, this report presents some of the most recent results obtained in these disciplines. The authors are members of three Collaborative Research Centers in Aachen, Munich and Stuttgart concerned with hypersonic vehicles. A major part of the research presented here deals with experimental and numerical aerodynamic topics ranging from low speed to hypersonic flow past the external configuration and through inlet and nozzle. Mathematicians and engineers jointly worked on aspects of flight mechanics like trajectory optimization, stability, control and flying qualities. Structural research and development was predominantly coupled to the needs for high temperature resistant structures for space vehicles.
