Materials Processing in High Gravity Liya L. Regel,William R. Wilcox,2012-12-06 There are two motives for studying materials processing in centrifuges. First, such research improves our understanding of the influence of acceleration and convection on materials processing. Second, there are commercial opportunities for production of unique and improved materials that cannot be prepared under normal earth conditions or in space. Through a combination of experiments and theory, we are gaining an understanding of centrifugation on phenomena of importance to materials processing. We find that it is necessary to consider not only acceleration, but also the Coriolis effect and the variation of acceleration with position. As one consequence, the vigor of buoyancy-driven convection is sometimes increased by centrifugation and sometimes decreased. Similarly, the tendency of the convection to become unstable or oscillatory may either be increased or decreased by centrifugation. On the other hand, the observed effects of centrifugation on product quality have largely gone unexplained. This volume constitutes the proceedings of The Second International Workshop on Materials Processing at High Gravity, hosted by Clarkson University in June of 1993. The concept for a workshop on materials processing in centrifuges was born at a series of informal meetings held in Paris in 1990. The First International Workshop on Materials Processing at High Gravity was held in May of 1991 in Dubna, USSR, on the banks of the Volga River. The proceedings of this workshop was published in 1992 as a special issue of the Journal of Crystal Growth.

UCL Hospitals Injectable Medicines Administration Guide University College London Hospitals,2013-07-19 I would definitely recommend this book to all staff with an interest and involvement in intravenous drug therapy. —The Pharmaceutical Journal There is no doubt that nurses will find this small book useful. It should be available for consultation in any clinical area where drugs are administered to patients by the injectable routes. —Journal of Clinical Nursing The safe administration of injectable medicines is key to patient safety. The NPSA recognises the use of injectable medicines is a high risk activity and recommends written information about injectables to be available at the point of preparation. The UCL Hospitals Injectable Medicines Administration Guide is a practical, accessible guide covering many important aspects of administering medicines by injection. It provides clear, concise information on the preparation and administration of over 245 injectable medicines for adults, paediatrics and neonates. It is an essential resource for nurses and other healthcare professionals: it provides the key information and advice needed for the safe and effective administration of injectable medicines. The Guide's introductory section provides a concise yet comprehensive overview of injectable therapy, including the risks and benefits of IV administration, infusion devices, and pharmaceutical aspects of injectable therapy. For each drug the alphabetically tabulated monographs provide: A practical method of preparation and administration via the IV, IM and SC routes, with risk reduction in mind at every step Expert advice from the team of specialist pharmacists at UCLH to ensure safe and pragmatic use of each medicine Monitoring advice for the management of reactions that may occur during administration Y-site and syringe driver compatibility data Minimum infusion volume data for fluid restricted patients Extravasation warnings, pH, sodium content, displacement values, stability and flush data New to this edition: 40 new monographs including recently marketed, unlicensed, rarely used and specialist medicines Detailed advice for the administration of high risk medicines such as heparin, with access to UCLH's medicine related guidelines at www.wiley.com/go/UCLH A colour-coded NPSA risk assessment for every mode of administration for every medicine, to highlight the safest method of administration A user guide and tutorial to give new readers confidence in using and understanding the Guide Revised chapters on administration methods and devices, aseptic non-touch technique, and latex allergy Fully revised and expanded Y-site compatibility section Spiral binding to allow the book to be left open at the relevant page The Guide is also available electronically at www.uclhguide.com.

HADI COMPREHENSIVE NEONATAL MEDICATIONS DR.ABDELHADI ABDELGABBAR ABDELHADI,2024-01-24 This publication is intended to provide comprehensive yet concise information on indications, doses, preparation, administration, and adverse reactions of drugs in use during the neonatal period. There is particular emphasis on preparation and administration by neonatal nurses. Compatibility of intravenous medications with concurrent other fluids or medications are thoroughly addressed. The routes for the administration of various medications are delineated. The most recognised adverse effects of various medications are flagged up, but the lists are by no means all-inclusive. It is advisable to consult up to date periodically if reactions or side effects outside the specific monograph texts are encountered. Furthermore, the publication focuses on known contraindications, precautions, and practical advice. A considerable effort has been exercised to ensure the doses, calculations, with or without dilutions, are accurate. However, further confirmation by the nursing and medical personnel is advised prior to the first use of each individual monograph. Feedback and suggestions are appreciated and can be sent to neonatologypractical@gmail.com. It is acknowledged that many neonatal units prefer to custom their own dilutions, concentrations, and infusion times. Nevertheless, the information in the various monographs is counterchecked with the practice of various well recognised international neonatal units. The use of computerised programmed infusion pumps is ideal but is not available in most nurseries. The latest edition of the British National Formulary for Children (BNFc, September 2022-September 2023, Last updated 14 December 2022) is used as the primary source for many medications' doses, side effects and contraindications. Various other useful references are utilised and are listed on the last page. The intention is to update the information on the web version of this publication on a regular basis. The publication is written bearing in mind the wide variations in the skill mix of neonatal practitioners, both nurses and doctors. Likewise, the challenging circumstances in developing countries are taken into consideration. Many of the stated calculations, methods of infusions or administration and monitoring requirements may appear too extensive and long winded. However, this is intended to be excessively simple to take some pressure off the shoulders of busy doctors and nurses. Printing and laminating individual monographs for the commonly used medications extracted from this publication is highly recommended. It would provide a quick and easily accessible source when every minute counts. The publication reflects the author's own acceptable and safe practices and advice. It is written with the intention of facilitating the delivery of care to the most vulnerable newborn. However, the responsibility of correct prescriptions, calculations and administration falls on the individual practitioners. The clinical pharmacist of the hospital may be requested to endorse individual drug monographs or the whole publication before the neonatal unit adopts it. It is a legal requirement to advise users of the information provided within this publication that the editor and publisher are not responsible for any errors or omissions and/or any consequences arising from the use of the information in this book.
