Measurement of Blast Fragmentation John A. Franklin, 2018-12-19 A collection of workshop papers providing state-of-the-art reviews on all aspects of fragmentation, including photographic requirements, image enhancement, statistical treatment, and applications in quarrying, mining and minerals processing industries.

Blast Effects Isabelle Sochet, 2017-12-22 This book compiles a variety of experimental data on blast waves. The book begins with an introductory chapter and proceeds to the topic of blast wave phenomenology, with a discussion on Rankine-Hugoniot equations and the Friedlander equation, used to describe the pressure-time history of a blast wave. Additional topics include arrival time measurement, the initiation of detonation by exploding wires, a discussion of TNT equivalency, and small scale experiments. Gaseous and high explosive detonations are covered as well. The topics and experiments covered were chosen based on the comparison of used scale sizes, from small to large. Each characteristic parameter of blast waves is analyzed and expressed versus scaled distance in terms of energy and mass. Finally, the appendix compiles a number of polynomial laws that will prove indispensable for engineers and researchers.

After the Blast Zoe Kazan, 2019-11-05 Generations ago, humans retreated deep underground after an environmental disaster ruined the world above. Nature is now simulated through brain-implanted chips, and fertility is regulated to keep the surviving population in balance. Anna and Oliver want to have a baby, and their options are running out.

Blast Wave Hans Albrecht Bethe, 1958 In this report the general phenomena connected with a blast wave in air will be discussed. The particular features of the blast wave produced by a nuclear explosion will be emphasized, but many of the developments in this volume will apply generally to blast waves produced by any type of explosion. In this introductory chapter we shall try to give a general idea of the various phenomena occurring in a blast wave in air, of their interrelation and their time sequence. In the following chapters the details of the theory will be given, including curves showing the pressure distribution as a function of time and position. We have not included any detailed discussion of the effects of an atomic bomb other than the blast effect. Only a short discussion of other effects is given in Chapter 3. For further discussion, especially on flash burn and radioactivity, reports on the experience in Japan should be consulted.

The Blast David Ohle, 2014 Fiction. Building the pedway so that everyone had access was a marvel of engineering. Yet no one knew who the engineers or builders were. They were lost to history. Though it was assumed that somewhere there must have been a central power source, perhaps in an underground facility with dynamos and belts and enormous gears, it had never been located.

Blast! Trish Gribben, Lopdell House Gallery, 2009-08 A generation ago in 1987, New Zealand passed legislation to make the country nuclear free. To celebrate this wonderful achievement writer, Trish Gribben and Lopdell House Gallery have published a children's book featuring Pat Hanly's anti-nuclear paintings and Gil Hanly's documentary photographs. The gallery will be showing an exhibition of the fabulous works featured in the book as well as Claudia Pond Eyley's excellent documentary, No Nukes is Good Nukes and Gil Hanly's Nuclear Free: Protest Photography. Pat Hanly's paintings are about passion and protest, light, love and life. He painted with many different styles and subjects but this book focuses on the work made in fear or protest about nuclear weapons. In the story of New Zealand's struggle to be nuclear-free no artist is more important than Pat Hanly. Pat Hanly was a small man with a big-hearted, wide-seeing view of the world. He was bold and brave. All through his life he painted and spoke up about political and social things that disturbed him, especially nuclear testing when France was exploding bombs at Moruroa, in French Polynesia in the Pacific Ocean. With this book and exhibition, we hope to engage an audience of all ages and tell a very New Zealand story of the power of art to move hearts and minds.

Project Palanquin Luke J. Vortman, 1968

A Double-charge Technique to Measure Face-on Blast W. Olson, 1961

Measurements were made of air blast parameters at the midpoint of a line joining 2 equal weight explosive charges. The explosive used was 50/50 Pentolite with dual 1 or 8 lb spheres being detonated simultaneously. The pressure transducer employed was a BRL pancake pressure gage employing a synthetic piezoelectric ceramic as the sensing element. A SATISFACTORY SIMULATION OF REFLECTION OF A BLAST WAVE FROM A RIGID WAL WAS OBTAINED. The pressure-time histories of the colliding waves were measured using gages which were developed for side-on blast experiments. These measurements agree with data obtained by other techniques. The data constitutes the first direct measurements with calibrated gages, of the pressure-time history of a face-on blast at scaled distances as small as $Z = 1.5 \text{ ft/lb}^{1/3}$. (Author).

Blast-off 2 Clemco Industries Corporation, 1994-11-01 The original Blast Off was produced following a series of tests that established the importance, to productivity, of some of the variables utilized in abrasive blast cleaning. This booklet was intended as an introduction to high-production blasting and as a readable summary of the important elements of abrasive blasting. This revised edition expands on the discussion of the elements of abrasive blasting that appeared in the original booklet and includes a number of new features. While more extensive than the original, it is still intensely practical and serves several purposes.
