The Book of Bluffs Mr. Matt Lessinger,2007-07-31 An expert poker player and columnist for Card Player magazine shows how players at every level of the game can master the art of the bluff. Twenty years ago, Mike Caro wrote the book on what to look for in a player’s movements, gestures, and facial expressions—their “tells”—to determine if they were bluffing, and it remains one of the bestselling poker books of all time. But what Caro didn’t do was teach players how to bluff. Enter Matt Lessinger, a professional poker player and columnist, who in THE BOOK OF BLUFFS shows players how to get their opponents to fold—no matter how strong a hand they’ve been dealt. Lessinger reveals how, with the correct timing and artistry, bluffing will allow a player to win while holding an inferior hand—the very essence of poker.

Celebrating Parenting Shabanam Gupta,2021-01-19 “As a young mother; I was always overwhelmed. And fearful. I had so many questions; and no answers. Of course; Dr. Benjamin Spock; Adele Faber and their ilk held my hand for a while; but could not assuage my fears. Not totally. I read the best books on parenting; written by trained child psychologists; Ph.Ds and M.Ds; but they were speaking to the western world. I needed to hear from someone who knew my world; my challenges; my insecurities and my social milieu. I missed having a book by my bedside; which I could leaf through and find answers. This is how this book came about. Hope you find some of your answers here.” —Shabnam Gupta

Both Sides of the Niger Andrew Kaufman,2013 Poetry. For many years I have admired the restless and generously spirited poems of Andrew Kaufman. He really does go to both sides of the Niger—both literally and metaphorically. This is not only a splendid book but it's also splendid journey!—Thomas Lux Kaufman accomplishes what few poets ever achieve—a travel and poetry book combined, which is as earthy and spiritual as anything the renowned anthropologist Levi-Straus could have written. This isn't an Americanized poetical version of Conrad's Heart of Darkness, but the real thing.—Hal Sirowitz As in his earlier work, Andrew Kaufman once again assumes the voice and the manner of the traveler in the ancient sense of that particular character that recurs throughout eastern and western literature. In BOTH SIDES OF THE NIGER, the world the traveler inhabits—because he is never simply an observer here—is the otherworldly literal and figurative landscape of West Africa, where more than just hunger and dehydration are at stake. What distinguishes Mr. Kaufman's poems from others whose work is driven by the facts and fictions of their world travels, is that the poems gathered here are illustrative of an obsessive and undeniable desire to be inside of the place the poet almost haphazardly finds himself in, and once there to participate as fully as possible in the pathologies of love and work that define our world and the world of cultures other than ours. This is a complicated gesture, especially when expressed in the form of poetry, and it can only be accomplished by having a craftsman's ear for the turn of the line, a palpable generosity of spirit that understands the sameness of us all, and a regard for language that compels the poet to settle on nothing less than getting the words right. Andrew Kaufman understands these things and his poetry is therefore worthy of our attention and our praise.—Bruce Weigl As in his earlier collection, Earth's Ends, Andrew Kaufman here takes the considerable risk of writing poems based on experiences sought, at least in part, for that purpose. They splendidly transcend reportage, largely because of Kaufman's deep knowledge of the craft. He allows traditional verse into the poems just long enough to establish the contrasting perceptions of order in the observer's mind and in the cultures observed. Thus he creates an exhilarating balance between the joys of discovery and the tragic limits of our understanding.—Henry Taylor
