Young,2019-02-01 This landmark publication distills the body of knowledge that characterizes mineral processing and extractive metallurgy as disciplinary fields. It will inspire and inform current and future generations of minerals and metallurgy professionals. Mineral processing and extractive metallurgy are atypical disciplines, requiring a combination of knowledge, experience, and art. Investing in this trove of valuable information is a must for all those involved in the industry—students, engineers, mill managers, and operators. More than 192 internationally recognized experts have contributed to the handbook’s 128 thought-provoking chapters that examine nearly every aspect of mineral processing and extractive metallurgy. This inclusive reference addresses the magnitude of traditional industry topics and also addresses the new technologies and important cultural and social issues that are important today.  [?] Centralized Control and Decentralized Execution: A Catchphrase in Crisis? Clint Hinote,2012-07-23 The Air Force’s master tenet of centralized control, decentralized execution is in danger of becoming dogma. Airmen have difficulty communicating the meaning of this phrase in a joint setting. This is partially due to our limited understanding of its history and the imprecise meaning of the words involved. Furthermore, the irregular conflicts in Afghanistan and Iraq (and the ongoing service debates in the Pacific) have demonstrated the need for a deeper understanding of this master tenet to advocate effectively for airpower solutions. We must get this right, as it is critical to maximizing airpower’s potential. Getting it right, however, requires moving beyond sound bites and bumper stickers.

 [?] *Valparaíso School*Rodrigo Pérez de Arce,Fernando Pérez Oyarzún,2003 The School of Architecture at the Catholic University of Valparaíso, Chile, underwent a transformation in 1952 when a group of young architects led by Alberto Cruz began teaching at the school. The Valparaíso School, as it became known, acquired an international reputation for its radical stance and its commitment to dialogue between architects and other disciplines. From 1970 onwards, it began to focus much of its research and design activity on the Open City project, which had been created by a group of architects, artists and poets with a vision of a city with no master plan, no imposed ordering devices, and no hierarchical networks of infrastructure. Originally set up as a laboratory-type environment, this alternative community has since become a place of residence and work for like-minded people. Valparaíso School: Open City Group provides an insight into this radical experiment in urban development through a series of essays and photographs.--BOOK JACKET.Title Summary field provided by Blackwell North America, Inc.
