United States. Congress. House. Committee on Banking and Currency.
Subcommittee on Consumer Affairs

The Twisted Dream Douglas F. Dowd, 1974

Truth in lending regulations United States. Congress. House. Committee on Banking and Currency. Subcommittee on Consumer Affairs, 1969

The Indebted Society James L. Medoff, Andrew Harless, 1996 Over the past twenty years, the quality of life for American workers - blue-collar and white-collar, young and old, skilled and unskilled - has gone from reasonable comfort to near desperation. In this brilliantly original and compelling book, two distinguished economists show how this disastrous downward swing can be traced directly to the insidious disease of debt - not just government debt but personal and corporate debt as well. Corporate debt has engendered a downsizing movement that has drained the last vestiges of job security from the workplace. Personal debt has fueled an ongoing consumption binge and, along with government debt, has choked off investment and left America with inferior jobs, low productivity, and an ever-increasing dependence on foreign workers. Worst of all, the debt explosion has spawned a new and dangerous class, the lenders. Backed by a powerful group of apologists in academia, in government, and on Wall Street, the lenders only compound the problem of debt by pushing for higher interest rates and lower inflation, no matter what the cost. In the end, working people, the poor, and the American family pay the price. Authors Medoff and Harless go far beyond a mere diagnosis and analysis of the disease of debt; they go on to offer potent and practical prescriptions for recovery on personal, corporate, and national levels. The situation is growing desperate, as America is ensnared in a vicious circle that leads us deeper and deeper into the red. The Indebted Society is both a dramatic wake-up call for Americans and a realistic program for returning the nation to economic and social health at last.

A new approach to financial regulation Great Britain. Treasury, Great Britain H.M. Treasury, 2012-01-27 This document accompanies the introduction into Parliament of the Financial Services Bill (HC Bill 278, session 2010-12, ISBN 9780215039545 and Explanatory notes Bill 278-EN, ISBN 9780215039132) and explains the Government's final proposals to reform the failed system of financial services regulation. These proposals follow on from extensive consultation, and a draft of the Bill was subject to pre-legislative scrutiny by a Joint Committee (report published as HL Paper 236/HC 1447, ISBN 9780108474064). This document details the main changes the Government is making to the Bill. Chapters cover: Bank of England and Financial Policy Committee; Prudential Regulation Authority; Financial Conduct Authority; regulatory processes and coordination; European and international regulation. Annexes include the Government's responses to the Joint Committee and to the Treasury Committee's inquiries into financial services regulation. The core proposals are: to establish a strong and expert macro-prudential authority, the Financial Policy Committee within the Bank of England to monitor and respond to systemic risks; to transfer responsibility for micro-prudential management of firms that manage complex risks on their balance sheets to a focused new regulator, the Prudential Regulatory Authority; and to provide for a focused new conduct of business regulator, the Financial Conduct Authority, to ensure that business across financial services and markets is conducted in a way that advances the interests of all users and participants. In any future crisis it will be clear that the Chancellor of the Exchequer is in charge. Regulation of consumer credit will be brought within the remit of the Financial Conduct Authority.
