Lady with a Badge Ken Bumpus,2016-01-26 In the previous book (PI Inc.), Patrick Ireland was one of Chicagos best detectives until he was seriously wounded while trying to end a war among rival juvenile gangs. Put on permanent disability, he retires to Miami and buys into a private detective agency. Along with acquiring extensive computer facilities, designed by the previous owner Andy Jackson (a geek among geeks), he also inherited Andys right-hand man, Alejandra Maria Sanchez de Torrez (Sandy). She proved such an asset in the detective agency that, after six years, Detective Ireland turned over the reins of PI Inc. Investigative Agency to her and went to being the security officer for the condominium where he lives.

Henry Wood Detective Agency MR Brian D. Meeks,2011-07-01 Henry Wood is a private detective in 1955. It is January, a new year, and before he can recover from celebrating it's arrival, a woman wonders into his office, she needs to hire him. She isn't the only one. He is in New York, loves the Brooklyn Dodgers, enjoys woodworking, and will soon find that he has gotten in over his head with his new case.

The Illinois Detective Agency Ethan J. Wolfe,2021 n 1884, the founder and matriarch of the Illinois Detective Agency is now elderly and active in the way that Charlie of Charlie's Angels was. Founded in 1848 as a stock detective agency, the founder is still the backbone of the business he built from the ground up. In The Case of the Missing Cattle, the Stock Growers Association of Montana appeals to Porter for help with a major cattle theft problem inside the Montana Territory. Hundreds, 2 maybe even thousands of cattle are being stolen off the open ranges, and the local sheriffs and army outposts are helpless to stop it. Porter assigns two of his best agents to the case, James Duffy and Jack Cavill. Both are experts in forensics of the day, expert marksmen, superior detectives, and fearless----

G&B Detective Agency R L Link,2019-08-23 Max and Skip are at it again when Milton and Monica bring a cold case into the agency. On a high shelf in the basement of the police department, Milton found a box of documents, reports and crime scene photographs that had sat in the evidence vault for decades. It had piqued the curiosity of an untold number of young detectives who took it down to look through it, only to put it back on the shelf still unsolved. Now Milton thought the case deserved another go, and this time he thought that the detectives at the G&B Detective Agency were the ones to do it. Max and Skip agree to investigate the sad, unsolved case of a college girl who hitched an early morning ride back to her home in Moline, Illinois, only to end up strangled and raped at the back entrance to a city park, her clothing neatly folded and placed by a fence next to her. The two detectives, with the help of Monica, Milton and Max's new friend Delbert, start putting the pieces together, each one leading to the same dead end. But as they get closer to the truth, a surprise turn of events places them all in an uncomfortable situation where they must decide whether to follow the letter of the law or make their own judgement of where justice lies for a murdered college coed named Nancy. Rollie Link retired from police work in 2006. Beginning with his early days in patrol, for twenty-nine years he worked every aspect of law enforcement until his return to patrol and his retirement as a day shift patrol lieutenant. Over the years on the department, he regularly pooled with his fellow officers to play the Powerball, and like everyone who plays the lottery, he spent hours thinking about what he would do if he ever won. After years of not even coming close, he decided to put those daydreams on paper. In the fifth novel of the G&B Detective series, Case of the Cold Case, Link takes his two millionaire detectives on another case investigated by the G&B Detective Agency.

The Headstone Detective Agency Robert J. Randisi,2019-09-16 John Headston is a private detective who, early in his career, was very successful, running a 12-man operation called THE HEADSTONE DETECTIVE AGENCY, mainly because the guy who painted the name on the door added the "e" at the end without realizing it was wrong. As the book opens, however, Headston is now 50, and the agency is down to just him. In his past he had run-ins with not only the law, but with the New York State Agency who had licensed him. As a result he spent some time in jail, and had his license revoked. Now he has it back, and is trying to get started again. His first case is a missing persons case, a wealthy woman whose husband just seems to have vanished from his Wall Street stockbroker job. Headston finds the man, who is now living under very odd circumstances, but the missing persons case quickly turns to murder. Aided by a tattooed young lady who decides she should work for him, Headston decides to work on the murder case, while attempting to avoid running afoul of the law and having his license revoked again—and possibly for good, this time.

The Expressman and the Detective Allan Pinkerton,2019-10-23 All history proves that no one can hug a secret to his breast and live (...) This is especially noticeable in persons who have committed criminal acts. When a trusted employee is suspected of stealing from the Adams Express Company in Alabama, the organization reaches out to the Pinkertons, the world's first private detective agency. Recounting true events, 'The Expressman and the Detective' (1874) tells a fascinating and suspenseful story of an investigation in which all that can prove a person's guilt is a confession. Allan Pinkerton, the founder of the agency, assigned agents to shadow the suspect, others to gain his trust and he was among the first to hire a female detective. The London Times famously called him a man at once deeply admirable and quite obnoxious. Allan Pinkerton (25 August 1819 - 1 July 1884) was a Scottish American detective and spy, best known for creating the Pinkerton National Detective Agency, the first detective agency of the United States.

A Double Life and the Detectives Allan Pinkerton, 2021-09-14 The Kent State University Press is excited to reissue these classic true crime detective stories by Allan Pinkerton, the Scottish American detective and spy who founded the Pinkerton National Detective Agency in 1850. His agency was the largest private law enforcement organization in the world at the height of its power, and its well-known logo of a large, unblinking eye actually served as inspiration for the term private eye. Detective Allan Pinkerton and his associates, including the indispensable Mr. Bangs, travel to Troyville, Pennsylvania--a beautiful village known for its rural beauty and community of farmers--to investigate the robbery of the Howard Express Company. The thieves made off with nearly $15,000 and vanished. Pinkerton learns that two suspicious men had arrived in town the morning before the robbery, and he races to track them down and discover their connection, if any, to the robbery. Meanwhile, in Oaklands, Indiana, the narrative follows Archibald MacDonald, a well-regarded member of his community who is noted for his good judgment, respected for his agricultural knowledge, and well known as an influence on local politics. A dedicated family man, MacDonald struggles to find the means to fund his children's higher education. As Pinkerton and his associates piece together the mystery, an important clue emerges: a torn envelope recovered from the robbery scene, with MacDonald's name and address on it. What is MacDonald's connection to the robbery? Is he one of the two men suspected of being involved? Could such an upstanding pillar of his community really be secretly involved in criminal activities? The crime described in A Double Life and the Detectives is less of a whodunit and more of a whydunit. As Pinkerton learns, societal pressure to keep up appearances and provide for family can have disastrous consequences, driving otherwise respectable people to commit brazen crimes.

The Railroad Forger and the Detectives Allan Pinkerton, 2021-09-14 The Kent State University Press is excited to reissue these classic true crime detective stories by Allan Pinkerton, the Scottish American detective and spy who founded the Pinkerton National Detective Agency in 1850. His agency was the largest private law enforcement organization in the world at the height of its power, and its well-known logo of a large, unblinking eye actually served as inspiration for the term private eye. In The Railroad Forger and the Detectives, real estate agent Thomas H. Cone vanishes suddenly. At the same time, the Pinkerton Detective Agency's Philadelphia branch, helmed by Mr. Linden, is hired by the Adams Express railroad company to investigate a draft forgery case. Two checks totaling more than $1,200 had been intercepted in the mail and falsely endorsed by none other than Mr. Thomas Cone! As the investigation heats up, Linden discovers that this crime is just the latest in a string of similar forgeries, which initially do not seem to be connected; the forgers are scattered across the country and seemingly have no relation to one another. Linden retraces Cone's whereabouts, beginning with his rented office space. The deserted office initially yields few clues until Linden spots Cone's blotting sheet. From a tangle of ink stains, Linden uncovers the address for a William R. Wales in Redrock, Ohio. Sensing a pattern, Linden is determined to find out if there is a gang of forgers, if William Wales is somehow involved, or if Cone has acted alone under a variety of aliases. A thrilling, fictionalized account of crime in the railroad business, The Railroad Forger and the Detectives is a tale of greed and an elaborate scheme--one only the Pinkerton Detective Agency can bring down.
