Design and Conduct of Indoor Radon Surveys IAEA, 2019-09-12 This Safety Report draws on the requirements of international standards and the recommendations of international organizations as well as on the scientific literature, together with direct experience from a number of IAEA Member States in relation to carrying out representative indoor radon surveys. The need for and the purpose of representative indoor radon surveys are discussed, as are the factors that must be considered in designing and carrying out such surveys. How the measurement data obtained from indoor radon surveys can be used to develop radon risk maps is also considered. While the Safety Report is focused specifically on national and regional surveys to evaluate average concentrations of radon in dwellings, many of the same considerations also apply to radon surveys for other types of buildings.

Timpani Goes to the Beach Deborah Katzburg, 2018-04-04 Timpani is going to the beach and all he can think about is how much fun he is going to have and all of the friends he will meet. But soon after arriving at the beach this playful outing becomes one of embarrassment as Timpani confronts issues about the size and shape of his body. Timpani is a very big drum and looks different from everyone else. Although he is courageous and tries many different activities at the beach he has trouble finding something where he feels comfortable and accepted. Will the children at the beach accept Timpani and befriend him? Will Timpani find a beach activity that is just right for him? Find out in this clever book where Timpani goes to the beach.

The Poetry of Religious Sorrow in Early Modern England Gary Kuchar, 2011-03-03 In early modern England, religious sorrow was seen as a form of spiritual dialogue between the soul and God, expressing how divine grace operates at the level of human emotion. Through close readings of both Protestant and Catholic poetry, Kuchar explains how the discourses of 'devout melancholy' helped generate some of the most engaging religious verse of the period. From Robert Southwell to John Milton, from Aemilia Lanyer to John Donne, the language of 'holy mourning' informed how poets represented the most intimate and enigmatic aspects of faith as lived experience. In turn, 'holy mourning' served as a way of registering some of the most pressing theological issues of the day. By tracing poetic representations of religious sorrow from Crashaw's devotional verse to Shakespeare's weeping kings, Kuchar expands our understanding of the interconnections between poetry, theology and emotion in post-Reformation England.
