Adult Learning and Relationships Paris S. Strom,Robert D. Strom,2011-04-01 The communication and technology revolution presents each age group of adults with new expectations for learning. This book describes how education for young adults (20 to 40 years of age), persons of middle age (40 to 60 years of age) and older adults (age 60 +) can be differentiated to fulfill changing role demands emerging in response to social transformation. Developmental tasks for a society of longevity are defined including why youth should be seen as essential sources of learning for adults. Themes for each generation are school, work, family, and personal identity. The way to ensure consideration of cultural evolution and cultural preservation is for intergenerational communication to become a common obligation. Reliance on age-segregated communication is popular and comfortable because peer conversations have greater agreement and less uncertainty. However, this practice prevents reflection on views regarded as important by other age groups. When greater amounts of time are devoted to intergenerational dialogue, the usual outcomes are reciprocal learning, mutual respect, and harmony. This book identifies and elaborates the conditions of learning needed to motivate an age-integrated society. This book is for several audiences. Faculty and students studying development will find insights on learning at successive ages. Counselors will learn about client needs across the full age range of adulthood. Social service providers will recognize transition in family relationships. Nurses and administrators will discover ways to help assisted living residents maintain mental abilities and build social networks. General readers will understand ways to improve life for relatives, friends, co-workers, and themselves.

Promoting Agricultural Trade to Enhance Resilience in Africa Godfrey Bahiigwa,2014-10-31 The 2013 Annual Trends and Outlook Report (ATOR) contributes to the emerging debate by analyzing Africa⬚s recent trade performance and future outlook at the global and regional levels, including discussions of the mechanisms of dealing with food price volatility, the scope for increasing trans-border trade, and the potential impacts of weather-related shocks and biophysical factors on intra-regional exports. The ATOR finds that Africa⬚s share of world trade of goods and services, and specifically of agricultural goods, made a turnaround and started increasing in the 2000s. Also, intra-Africa agricultural exports have grown rapidly in recent years, particularly in calorie terms, thus lessening the continent⬚s dependence on the West in terms of trade. The Report attributes the improved trade performance to recent improvements in economic growth and infrastructure on the continent, together with higher world prices for some key raw materials.

The efficiency programme Great Britain: National Audit Office,2007-02-08 Government departments have been set a series of targets for implementing efficiency gains of £21.5 billion a year by 2007-08, as part of the Treasury's Efficiency Programme following on from the Gershon Review of public sector efficiency. This NAO report finds that considerable progress has been made by departments towards achieving the efficiency targets, and the Efficiency Programme has ensured a greater focus on value for money issues among senior staff. Progress has also been made in addressing measurement issues, supported by new guidance issued by the Office of Government Commerce, although some reported efficiency gains still carry a significant risk of inaccuracy. The OGC has also initiated a new reporting system to improve the accuracy of reported efficiency gains, but this would benefit from a greater review process to assess whether they meet good practice, either through a stronger internal audit within departments or by the OGC. Departments must improve the transparency of the reporting process, and do more to encourage staff to put forward ideas for efficiency improvements. A companion volume is available separately (HCP 156-II, session 2006-07, ISBN 9780102944372) containing twelve opinion pieces on options to improve efficiency in the public sector, written by commentators from the fields of business, trade unions, academia and management consultancy.
