Mark L. Goldstein

Employee Security : GSA Has No Criteria for Assessing Adequacy United States. General Accounting Office,1987

Building Security Bernard L. Ungar,2002 In the wake of Sept. 11, 2001, this report discusses the respon. of 22 Fed. agencies for the protection of the Fed. bldgs. they own &/or occupy. It determines: the roles and responsibilities that Fed. departments and agencies have in providing security for office space they occupy; whether security assessments of facilities had been completed; the types of security forces and technologies used to secure and protect Fed. bldgs; funding for security oper.; the coordination of security efforts within and among agencies to improve or enhance bldg. security; and impediments that make it difficult to tighten security at Fed. bldgs. Also provides the types and sources of security-related guidance that are available for agencies to use in addressing bldg. security vulnerabilities.

Building security Interagency Security Committee has had limited success in fulfilling its responsibilities. , Homeland Security Mark L. Goldstein,2010-03 There is ongoing concern about the security of federal buildings and their occupants. The Federal Protective Service (FPS) within the Dept. of Homeland Security is responsible for providing law enforcement and related security services for nearly 9,000 federal buildings under the control and custody of the General Services Admin. (GSA). In 2004, a set of key protection practices from the collective practices of federal agencies and the private sector was identified that included: allocating resources using risk management, leveraging technology, and information sharing and coordination. This report determined whether FPS's security efforts for GSA buildings reflected key practices. Includes recommendations. Illustrations.

Homeland Security United States. Government Accountability Office, 2016 GAO designated federal real-property management as a high-risk area in part because of physical security challenges at federal facilities. FPS and GSA have joint responsibility for protecting federal facilities held or leased by GSA. FPS has primary responsibility for the security and protection of buildings and their occupants, whereas GSA has primary responsibility for security fixtures, maintenance, and building access. In light of these challenges, GAO was asked to review (1) how the agencies' collaboration reflects key practices to ensure facility security and (2) the impact of their collaboration practices on day-to-day operations at the regional and facility level. GAO analyzed pertinent laws and documents, compared FPS's and GSA's collaboration efforts against GAO's selected key-collaboration practices, and interviewed agency officials at the headquarters and regional levels selected based on various factors. While the results from regions cannot be generalized, they provided illustrative examples. GAO recommends that FPS and GSA take actions to improve their collaboration in several areas, including defining common outcomes, agreeing on roles and responsibilities, and communicating compatible policies and procedures. DHS specifically concurred with GAO's recommendations, and GSA agreed to work with FPS to address the findings.

Homeland Security Lori Rectanus, 2016-02-17 GAO designated federal real-property management as a high-risk area in part because of physical security challenges at federal facilities. The Federal Protective Service (FPS) and the General Services Administration (GSA) have joint responsibility for protecting federal facilities held or leased by GSA. FPS has primary responsibility for the security and protection of buildings and their occupants, whereas GSA has primary responsibility for security fixtures, maintenance, and building access. This report reviewed (1) how the agencies' collaboration reflects key practices to ensure facility security; and (2) the impact of their collaboration practices on day-to-day operations at the regional and facility level. Tables and figures. This is a print on demand report.

Homeland Security: Greater Attention to Key Practices Would Help Address Security Vulnerabilities at Federal Buildings Mark L. Goldstein, 2010-06 The Federal Protective Service (FPS) is responsible for providing law enforcement and related security services for nearly 9,000 federal facilities under the control and custody of the General Services Admin. (GSA). In 2004 a set of key protection practices was identified from the collective practices of federal agencies and the private sector, which included allocation of resources using risk management, strategic management of human capital, leveraging of technology, information sharing and coordination, and performance measurement and testing. This testimony is based on past reports and testimonies and discusses: (1) limitations FPS faces in protecting GSA buildings and resulting vulnerabilities; and (2) actions FPS is taking.

Federal Building and Facility Security Shawn Reese, 2010-10 In FY 2007, the fed. government's real property portfolio comprised 446,000 buildings with an area of 3.3 billion square feet and a replacement value of $772.8 billion. Contents of this report: (1) Fed. Facility Security Levels; (2) Interagency Security Committee; (3) Exec.

Branch Facility Security: Fed. Protective Service (FPS): Historical Overview and Current FPS Authority; FPS's Use of Contract Security Guards; (4) Fed. Court Facility Security; (5) Supreme Court; (6) Coordination of Fed. Building Security; (7) Fed. Building Security Issues: FPS's Operations, Use and concerns of Contract Security Guards: FPS's Oper.; Coord. and Sharing of Fed. Building Security Info.; Facility Security Committees; Appropriations and Resources.

Federal Real Property United States Government Accountability Office, 2017-09-21 threats from foreign sources that may target their information systems and affect the physical security of the occupants. GAO was asked to examine GSA's lease of high-security space from foreign owners. This report addresses (1) what is known about foreign ownership of high-security space leased by GSA, (2) potential risks posed by such foreign ownership, and (3) policies and procedures regarding GSA's leasing of space from foreign-owned entities. GAO reviewed GSA's leasing documents; identified and checked ownership information regarding high-security leased space to the extent possible using data, as of March 2016, from a firm that specializes in analyzing the commercial real estate market; interviewed GSA and federal foreign investment officials, tenant agencies that were occupying space owned by foreign entities, and five real estate companies that lease space to GSA or provide related services; and visited three foreign-owned high-security leased facilities selected to represent a variety of owners and tenants.

GSA Container Identification Joe Cortie, Andy Dennison, 2009 Compiled and written by two of the industry's leading educators on GSA approved security equipment. GSA Container Identification contains approximately 100 pages of information on GSA approved security containers and vault doors. This full color book is packed with information on all types of GSA approved containers including tips on how to tell one manufacturer's products from the others, and identify products often mistaken for GSA approved products that are not. The more than 50 year history of GSA containers has brought many changes in specifications and designs. The authors have worked diligently to research these changes and make this the most accurate, up to date reference on GSA approved containers and vault doors available.

Homeland Security Mark L. Goldstein, 2009-02 In 2003, the Fed. Protective Service (FPS) transferred from the Gen. Services Admin. (GSA) to the Dept. of Homeland Security (DHS). FPS provides physical security and law enforcement services to about 9,000 GSA facilities. FPS currently has an annual budget of about $1 billion, 1,100 employees, and 15,000 contract guards located throughout the country. Recently, FPS has faced several challenges protecting GSA facilities and fed. employees. This report provides information and analysis on (1) FPS's operational challenges and actions it has taken to address them; (2) funding challenges FPS faces and actions it has taken to address them; and (3) how FPS measures the effectiveness of its efforts to protect GSA facilities. Includes recommend. Graphs.
